Army Will Continue Jupiter Development

The Army will be permitted to continue development of the Jupiter missile under the fiscal '58 Defense Department budget.

Representative Gerald R. Ford, Jr. (R-Mich.) told the House during debate on the big military funds bill that the Appropriations Committee has been assured on this point.

He was questioned closely about the program by Representative LeRoy H. Anderson (D-Mont.), a Major General, USAF.

Here are the details about the Jupiter program as they were unfolded in the debate:

Rep. Anderson—Can the gentleman tell me where in the appropriation of money for the Army they have the Jupiter missile?

Rep. Ford—There is no money in fiscal 1958 in the Army R&D for the Jupiter. As the gentleman undoubtedly knows, the Army is only funding in fiscal 1957 for the Jupiter program. In the testimony it has been brought out by a number of members of the subcommittee that any funds for the Jupiter program in fiscal 1958 will come out of either the emergency fund that the Secretary of Defense has or will come out of the transfer authority which the Secretary

AMERICA PROFITS from technological advances spun off by the missile race, Maj. Gen. John B. Medaris, commanding general of Army Ballistic Missile Agency, told American Ordnance Association gathering at San Francisco. He said at press conference that American taxpayers would be better off "wasting" a few billions on a dud guided missile project if it meant that a second one undertaken simultaneously succeeded "in time."

Army Charges Air Support Differences Hurt Training; Sees Shift In Missile Role

(FULL TEXT OF ARMY REPORT,

Army and Air Force differences over close air support are impairing the effectiveness of joint training, the Army charged this week.

In a report to the House Armed Services Committee, the Army said its field commanders must have "general direction and control" of tactical air units supporting the ground mission.

The Air Force declared in an earlier report that Defense Department directives tend to move tactical air out of the ground combat zone, leaving the Army to rely to a greater extent on guided missiles.

Both reports were submitted to the Committee at the request of Representative Leon H. Gavin (R-Pa.). Congressman Gavin believes the Army should have at least "pilot" tactical air units to enable it to perfect air-ground techniques needed in combat.

Referring to the new close air support role of guided missiles, the Army said that such missiles eventually "are expected to be more effective than fighter-bombers in providing accurate, responsive, and all-weather close-support."

However, the Army said it considers that "for the foreseeable future there continues to be close support missions which will require piloted aircraft."

Meanwhile, the Army paper states that "doctrinal differences between the Army and the Air Force concerning close air support, until resolved, will impair the effectiveness of joint training." Efforts are being made to settle these differences, the Army said.

ATC, MATS, ARDC Will Shift Hqs

Air Training Command Headquarters, at Scott AFB, Tex., will be moved to Randolph AFB, Tex., "in the near future," Secretary of the Air Force James H. Douglas told the House Armed Services Committee this week.

The Secretary said that Headquarters, Air Research and Development Command, would be moved from Baltimore, Md., to Andrews Air Force Base, Md., and that MATS Headquarters would be transferred to Scott AFB, Ill.

Dates for the movements have not yet been set.

Quantico Conference Will Hear New Alarms On Manpower Losses

THE fifth annual Secretaries Conference at the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va., 13-16 June, will hear alarming reports from top military leaders—notably in the Air Force—concerning the impact on combat readiness of continuing manpower losses.

Disclosures at the Quantico sessions, such as loss of SAC crew readiness, may prompt proponents of a military pay adjustment, notably Senator Stuart Symington (D-Mo.), former Air Force Secretary, and Representative James Van Zandt (R-Pa.), a Captain in the Naval Reserve, to demand early hearings on pay bills they have sponsored.

Their legislation is based on the Cor-diner Committee Report, whose conclusions largely were scuttled by the Budget Bureau in rejecting legislative proposals advanced by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson.

There were reports on Capitol Hill this week that Senator Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), Chairman of the Armed Services Committee, will designate Senator Symington to head a special subcommittee to hold pay hearings. A similar procedure was followed in last year's Senate manpower inquiry.

The pay hearings, either just before the present session of Congress adjourns or early next year, are certain to feature new testimony by General Curtis E. LeMay, USAF, retiring Commander-in-Chief of the Strategic Air Command. He has been insistent that outmoded military pay scales must be revised to safeguard the readiness of SAC and other major military commands.

THE JOURNAL has obtained an urgent

House Committees Differ On MediCare

The House Appropriations Committee and the House Armed Services Committee do not see eye to eye on the Defense Department's dependent medical care program.

The MediCare Act permits military dependents to go to either civilian or military hospitals.

The Appropriations group wants the Services to eliminate this "free choice" except in areas where military facilities are not adequate (The Journal, 25 May).

Two ranking members of the Armed Services group say "free choice" is absolutely essential to the success of the program.

Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.), who headed the Armed Services Subcommittee which drafted the MediCare Act, says the Services are afraid that all dependents will go to civilian hospitals, whereas civilian doctors are afraid the dependents all will go to military hospitals.

The only way to find out what they will do—and to learn which system is cheaper—is to continue the "free choice" provision "until more experience has been accumulated," he said.

Representative Leslie C. Arends (R-Ill.), ranking minority member of the Armed Services Committee, agrees with Mr. Kilday. He told the House "we should not follow the recommendation as set forth in the Appropriations Committee report."

The Appropriations Committee had expressed fear that the "free choice" provision would make the workload in military hospitals "fall short of the desirable level" and that it would "cause overload-

BULLPUP. Model of the Navy's new air-to-surface missile being manufactured by The Martin Co., of Baltimore, Md. The Bullpup, discussed by VAdm. William V. Davis, USN, DCNO for Air, before a meeting of the Aviation Writers Association (see last week's Journal page 3) is designed to be launched by attack aircraft from any position outside the effective range of enemy high volume ground fire and to provide sufficient accuracy to destroy small targets without excessive sorties or expenditure of large quantities of bombs and rockets.

PROPOSES NEW MILITARY STRUCTURE

A new military structure has been proposed by Representative Errett P. Scrivner (R-Kans.).

The House Appropriations Committee member says he is convinced that vast sums can be saved "if our concepts of military organization are realized." This realignment, he told the House, would convert the three services into three basic commands: strategic, tactical and defense.

Under Mr. Scrivner's plan, the strategic command would be primarily an Air Force operation but would include Navy carrier task forces. The tactical force would be predominately Army, but would include close air support, short range tactical missiles, the airlift service transport capability and the job of keeping shipping lanes open to the areas where such tactical forces may be involved. It would include sizable portions of all three Services including the Marine Corps.

The defense force would be primarily an air and missile defense command, including Army antiaircraft and antimissile forces as well as Navy forces involved in offshore patrol and close-in antisubmarine defense.

The present JCS structure would be abolished.

Congressman Scrivner said "the present basic concepts behind our ground, sea and air division of military responsibility is no longer valid."

Should The Armed Forces Be Merged? House Leaders Take Opposing Views

A proposal to merge the Armed Forces has resulted in a head-on clash between two powerful members of the House of Representatives.

Chairman George H. Mahon (D-Tex) of the House Military Appropriations Subcommittee believes "something approaching a merger" should be put into effect.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Armed Services Committee believes such a step is only the "wishful theory" of those who think "more centralization of power brings about savings." He says "Nothing could be further from the truth."

Both Congressmen have an intimate knowledge of the operations of the Armed Forces.

Representative Mahon, who will be 57 in September, has served in the Congress since 1934. He has been a member of the Appropriations Committee since 1940 and chairman of the military subcommittee since 1949.

Representative Vinson, 74, in November, has served in the House since 1914 and is second in seniority only to House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex). Mr. Vinson was a member for many years—and Chairman from 1931 to 1947—of the old Naval Affairs Committee. This Committee was merged with the Military Affairs Committee in 1947 and Mr. Vinson became Chairman of the new Armed Services Committee in 1949, a position which he has held ever since (except during the 83d Congress when the Republicans controlled the House).

During last week's debate on the military budget, the two veteran legislators found themselves at odds over the philosophy of unification.

Chairman Mahon told the House that the United States cannot afford the "fabulously expensive" new weapons required by the Armed Forces if, at the same time, it has to support "an outmoded military structure which promotes unwholesome interservice rivalry and duplication."

He said "A part of the answer is a greater degree of unification instead of tension and disunity, something approaching a merger." Mr. Mahon charged "The time has come to tear down the costly iron curtain which separates the Services."

Chairman Vinson didn't agree. He declared that he does "not believe for one moment that the merger of our Armed Services would save the taxpayers one thin dime. If anything, I am sure that merger might well bring about added costs." He said such a move would create "a military monstrosity that would be an open invitation to disaster."

As for inter-service bickering, Mr. Vinson told the House "it is not improper for a Service to advocate its own weapons system. In fact, it is essential in order that the Congress may choose wisely in appropriating the necessary funds for future developments."

He said "What might appear to some to be duplication, in my opinion, actually amounts to competition."

House Committees Differ On MediCare

From first page—ing of civilian medical and hospital facilities."

Mr. Kilday noted that the Secretary of Defense has authority to restrict the "free choice" provision in areas where problems arise. He also mentioned that the medical profession itself "is very sincerely concerned about any infringement upon free choice."

Congressman Kilday said "I hope the Secretary of Defense will continue his regulation in effect until more information is available."

ARMY AND NAVY OUTMODED?

Chairman Clarence Cannon (D-Mo), of the House Appropriations Committee thinks the Army and Navy would be of little value in a future war.

During House debate on the military budget, Congressman Cannon said the Army "is no longer of any use in time of war except in occupying territory taken from the air and in enforcing martial law."

The Navy, he said, "would cease to exist in a matter of hours" except for her submarines. He told the House it is "ridiculous" to think the Navy could "protect us" if war should come.

Chairman Cannon said "the commander of the Air Force tells us" that he can sink the Navy's proposed, $314 million atomic carrier "in two hours or less."

The next world war, the veteran legislator said, "will be decided in a matter of hours." He declared that it "will be lost or won in the air," and, "if won it must be won by airpower."

Two other members of the House took umbrage over Congressman Cannon's statement and amused their colleagues with a play on the Chairman's name.

Representative Hugh Scott (R-Pa), said a balanced defense is "vital to our safety" and any assertion that the Army and Navy will be of little use in future wars ignores the proven value of both services in Korea. He added "much as we have relied upon the cannon in the past, perhaps now the cannon is in danger of being old fashioned, obsolete, and out of step with the concept of modern warfare."

Representative Gordon Canfield (R-NJ) said "Perhaps the gentleman means to say that the cannon volleyed and thundered but did not get very far."

Congressman Scott added "And did not hit the mark."

Nevertheless, Mr. Cannon said, "Every capital ship of the Navy would be sunk in the first few hours."

If the Air Force lost control of the air, he stated, "our armies would be panic-stricken mobs in full flight, each man seeking shelter from above. With the enemy in control of the air nothing could save them."

Budget Cut Poses Manpower Problem, House Leader Says; Pentagon Seeks Senate Help

The Pentagon turned to the Senate this week to ask restoration of part of the $2.5 billion military budget cut approved by the House on 29 May.

House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr., said if the reduction stands it means the Armed Forces will lose 32,500 uniformed men.

Capitol Hill observers stated, however, that the economy drive which resulted in the House cuts is likely to be continued on about the same level in the Senate.

The House rejected efforts to restore $158 million for the Army, $130 million for the Navy and $175 million for the Air Force. A move to recommit the big money bill was defeated by a vote of 242 to 151. The House voted final approval of the $33.5 billion budget 394 to 1.

Language which would have forced the Army to continue operating two hospitals (the Army and Naval Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., and Murphy General Hospital, Waltham, Mass.) was erased by the House. The Army has maintained for several years that the patient load at both facilities is too small to warrant keeping them open.

The House-approved budget provides $7.2 billion for the Army (including a $10 million carryover to aid the six-months Reserve training program), $9.8 billion for the Navy and Marine Corps, $15.8 billion for the Air Force, $16.3 billion for the Office of the Secretary of Defense and $682 million for interservice activities.

The prospect of a manpower cut as a result of the reductions was hotly contested.

Congressman Martin said the reduced funds will cause the Army and Navy to cut their uniformed personnel by 10,000 each, the Air Force by 9,500 and the Marine Corps by 3,000.

The House Appropriations Committee said the reduced funds will have no effect on manpower and this position was defended during the House debate by Representative George H. Mahon (D-Tex), Chairman of the Military Appropriations Subcommittee. He said the manpower cut issue is being raised to "intimidate the fearful."

Defense Secretary Wilson, however, in an appearance before the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the cut will result in "personnel reductions below the budgeted ceilings." He did not specify the extent of the RIF.

Mr. Wilson also said the reduced budget will prevent the Services from granting a $50 million increase to top enlisted specialists and will slow down the procurement of planes, ships and missiles.

Other Service leaders also pressed the Senate Appropriations Committee to restore some of the money. Here is what they said will happen if they have to operate with reduced funds:

Army Secretary Wilber B. Brucker—The Army will have to discharge 20,000 civilian employees; some major posts, camps and stations may have to be closed; communications and communications security programs will be cut to an "unacceptable degree"; major reductions will be forced in Army research programs; the standard of living of Army personnel will be further reduced as the result of inadequate maintenance funds for Army quarters and administration buildings.

Navy Secretary Thomas S. Gates, Jr.—The Navy will be able to procure fewer aircraft and ships than originally programmed this year; denial of funds for a new seaplane tender means that new Navy seaplanes cannot be properly maintained and supported in their normal deployment schedule; ability to procure mobilization reserve stocks will be reduced.

Air Force Secretary James H. Douglas, Jr.—Even if the Senate should return the $354 million eliminated by the House from the AF aircraft and related procurement programs "it is entirely possible" that the program will have to be reduced for other reasons or that the Air Force will have to come back to the Congress for supplemental appropriations. If the Senate should return the $100 million eliminated from other AF procurement programs the requirements still "would be underfunded." Air Force combat capability will be reduced as a result of the reduction in flying hours. Part of the $162.9 million reduction in operations and maintenance will "necessarily be applied to combat unit training." The $12 million reduction in R&D funds will have to apply largely to the technical R&D effort which the Air Force regards as "an absolute minimum."

Pentagon Asks Partial Restoration Of Budget Cut; AF Gets Major Share

The Pentagon is asking the Senate to return $1.2 billion of the amount cut from the military budget by the House.

Assistant Secretary of Defense W. J. McNell told the Senate Appropriations Committee this week that the Defense Department would like to recover about $191 million for the Army, $392 million for the Navy and $1.2 billion for the Air Force.

He said the Pentagon does not plan to appeal the $596 million cut in Army and Marine Corps procurement.

Here are the amounts which the Defense Department would like to see put back in the budget for each of the Services:

ARMY—$36 million for military personnel; $146 million for maintenance and operations; $8 million for research and development, and $1 million for the Alaska Communications System.

NAVY-MARINE CORPS—$19 million for Navy personnel; $5 million for Marine Corps personnel; $5 million for Marine Corps troops and facilities; $119 million for aircraft and related procurement; $22 million for aircraft and facilities; $118 million for shipbuilding and conversion; $7 million for ships and facilities; $70 million for procurement of ordnance and ammunition; $2 million for ordnance and facilities; $2 million for medical care; $3 million for civil engineering; $10 million for research and development; $1 million for service-wide operations; and $175,000 for naval petroleum reserves.

AIR FORCE—$354 million for aircraft and related procurement; $122 million for procurement other than aircraft; $132 million for operations and maintenance; $39 million for military personnel; $12 million for research and development, and $2 million for Reserve personnel.

MAJ. GEN. THOMAS C. MUSGRAVE, USAF, (right), Director of Air Force Manpower and Organization, enjoys a laugh with Brig. Gen. Joseph A. Bulger, USAF Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, when the former arrived at Wiesbaden by plane from Washington for conferences with USAF officials. Gen. Musgrave later went to Bitburg Air Base to confer with manpower officials there.

Manpower Loss Will Be No. 1 Problem At Secretaries Quantico Conference

communication sent by General LeMay to all directorates and staff agencies of SAC Headquarters at Offutt AFB, Nebr. The Air Force Vice Chief of Staff designate, whose briefings at previous Secretaries Conference sessions in Quantico, Va., have commanded top attention and who will be present at this year's meeting, told his aides:

"In order that there will be no misunderstanding, nor misinformation presented to outsiders or newcomers within this command, I wish to restate what I know to be the Number One problem in SAC today.

"I CONSIDER (the capital letters are his) THE MOST CHALLENGING AND IMPORTANT PROBLEM IN THE COMMAND TODAY TO BE OUR FAILURE TO RETAIN OUR SKILLED PERSONNEL."

General LeMay has recently given a full-dress briefing at SAC Headquarters to the new Assistant Defense Secretary for Manpower, Personnel and Reserve Forces, William H. Francis, Jr.

Mr. Francis also visited Air Defense Command headquarters at Colorado Springs, Colo. There, he learned that 8 out of every 10 pilots completing obligated tours with ADC are leaving the command, that less than 25% of ADC pilots have over 250 hours in the aircraft they are flying.

There is speculation that information obtained by Assistant Secretary Francis during his visits to SAC and ADC and to other commands, some of it not yet public, will be dramatized in his presentation at the Secretaries Conference.

Pentagon observers recall that in past years his predecessors, Assistant Secretaries John A. Hannah, now President of Michigan State University, and Carter L. Burgess, President of TransWorld Airlines, took the occasion of the Quantico Conference to drive home the need for manpower legislation.

Whether Mr. Francis will follow in this tradition of forceful and frank discussion of what is widely recognized as the Number One problem in the Armed Forces remains to be seen.

Regardless of Mr. Francis' briefing at Quantico, it can be stated that the Air Force leadership, as well as top spokesmen for the Army, Navy and Marines, will not miss the opportunity to stress the manpower problem.

For Air Force Secretary James H. Douglas and Navy Secretary Thomas S. Gates, Jr., the 1957 Quantico Conference will be their first opportunity to address the top-level audience of civilian and military leaders as heads of their Services. Both have moved up recently from the Under Secretary positions.

Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker will stress the manpower problem at Quantico in a presentation that will describe the Army's increased use of highly technical weapons, such as the Nike Hercules and Hawk anti-aircraft missiles. He and General Maxwell D. Taylor, USA, Chief of Staff, are expected also to speak on manpower implications of the Army's current "Pentomic" reorganization, which will make greater demands on leadership for junior officers and non-commissioned officers.

At the Pentagon, Defense leaders remain hopeful that the Senate will ease cuts in the fiscal '58 budget voted by the House. This will be important to the fate of plans for implementing "proficiency pay" for enlisted men in ranks of E-4, E-5 and E-6.

Secretary Wilson has declared (THE JOURNAL, 1 June) that unless cuts imposed by the House are modified, the announced intention to give up to 15 per cent of enlisted strength pay increases of $12 to $50 per month at a cost of $49 million per year will be jeopardized.

Failure to put into effect such a program, which was widely heralded, would be certain to have a marked effect on morale.

On the other hand, there are many in the Services who say that the "patchwork" proficiency pay scheme, suggested by the Budget Bureau when it rejected Secretary Wilson's original pay bill, it-

Next Week

For the fifth consecutive year, The Journal will give comprehensive on-the-spot coverage to the Secretaries Conference at Quantico, Va. These weekend meetings invariably develop news of importance to all military families. Journal staff members will be on hand to report significant results of the Conference and to give readers a behind-the-scenes appreciation of the top-level sessions. Watch for articles in the 15 and 22 June issues.

The first International Naval Review in U. S. Waters in 50 years takes place 12 June at Hampton Roads, Va. Ships of 18 nations will participate. Navy and Marine Corps flyers also will participate prominently. Next week's issue of The Journal will spotlight the mighty Naval display.

self a watered-down version of the Cordiner Committee Report, will have an adverse effect among certain skilled enlisted personnel.

These Service experts point out, for example, that the plan announced by Secretary Wilson provides no benefits whatsoever for men in E-7 rank. The Cordiner Committee had suggested two new ranks of E-8 and E-9.

Thus, a B-52 line chief, the type of Serviceman whom the Cordiner Committee particularly wanted to reward in order to give him greater recognition and encouragement to remain in service, will watch a subordinate moved up to his pay level, while his pay remains unchanged.

The second phase of Mr. Wilson's "Budget Bureau directed" pay plan, namely to provide benefits for Reserve officers completing contract tours, requires legislative action. So far there has been none.

It is known that the Navy is particularly anxious for passage of this legislation. The Army and Air Force are less enthusiastic, because they are seeking to appoint thousands of Reserves to Regular rank.

Although the Reserve retention bill will encourage many officers to seek career service, others are certain to be encouraged to leave active duty after completion of required contract service—say a total of eight years service—and collect a year's pay.

At Secretary Wilson's direction, the Defense Department's top military authority on all aspects of the Cordiner study, Maj. Gen. H. R. Maddux, USAF, is continuing to coordinate activities of all Services related to military compensation.

In addition to his assignment as Director of Manpower Requirements in the Office of Assistant Secretary Francis, General Maddux has been designated Director of the Defense Department Task Force on Modernization of Military Compensation.

Secretary Wilson, in accepting the Cordiner Committee Report (The Journal, 11 May), said that "further study and development of the overall Cordiner Committee program will be a major Defense Department undertaking. . . ."

Mr. Francis and General Maddux are charged with carrying out that pledge from Secretary Wilson.

In view of the fact that Secretary Wilson has said repeatedly that he endorses the major principles advocated by the Cordiner Report, it can be assumed that Mr. Francis will report at Quantico on what is being done to keep the manpower issue, documented by the Cordiner study, before Congress and the public.

President Ralph J. Cordiner of the General Electric Company, who guided the comprehensive study into all phases of military and civilian compensation, is expected to continue his efforts to win greater public understanding for the military manpower problem and what needs to be done about it.

He spoke forthrightly on this matter in an Armed Forces Day address in Washington (THE JOURNAL, 25 May). It is known that he is being asked to make further public statements on the compensation study, one possibility being a nation-wide television news program.

Here Is Text Of General LeMay's "Number One Problem" Statement

General Curtis E. LeMay, USAF, as one of a series of final actions at Strategic Air Command Headquarters prior to his departure for Washington and duty as Air Force Vice Chief of Staff, has made it plain that manpower continues SAC's Number One problem.

General LeMay, making farewell visits to SAC bases, has lost no opportunity to stress his support for changes in military pay. He continues to call for enactment of the Cordiner Committee recommendations, and it can be expected, of course, that he will continue the fight in his high echelon Pentagon assignment.

The text of General LeMay's official message:

3 May 1957

MEMORANDUM FOR: All Directorates and Staff Agencies
Headquarters SAC

SUBJECT: The Number One Problem in SAC

1. The critique of the recent Colonels Induction and Financial Management Seminar indicates that among the SAC staff there is no unanimity of opinion as to the NUMBER ONE PROBLEM in SAC today.

2. In order that there will be no misunderstanding, nor misinformation presented to outsiders or to newcomers within this command, I wish to restate what I know to be the Number One problem in SAC today.

3. I CONSIDER THE MOST CHALLENGING AND IMPORTANT PROBLEM IN THE COMMAND TODAY TO BE OUR FAILURE TO RETAIN OUR SKILLED PERSONNEL.

4. Admittedly, you all have many problems within your areas of responsibility; however, nearly all of these problems are generated by the Number One problem, i.e., our failure to retain our trained personnel.

5. In all of your discussions it is my desire that you continually emphasize that the Number One problem in SAC today is the retention of our skilled personnel.

6. I also desire that you examine every directive issued by you to insure that you are not further aggravating the problem unnecessarily.

CURTIS E. LEMAY
General, USAF
Commander in Chief

also has under his control. So that the Jupiter program, if we can rely on the people in the Department of Defense, and I am certain we can, will not be hurt in fiscal 1958. Of course, I assume the gentleman knows it has been decided that sometime early in fiscal 1958 there will be this great decision whether we are going to proceed with Jupiter or with Thor. Thor is the Air Force IRBM program."

Rep. Anderson—In your judgment, since the Army is going to continue the development of Jupiter and since we know this is going to take another $25 million, might it not be a good idea if this Congress put into this appropriation bill the $25 million so that we would know that Jupiter would be properly developed by the people who are now working on it?

Rep. Ford—No. I cannot agree with the gentleman, because under the bill the Secretary of Defense, and rightly so, has $135 million in either emergency funds or transfer authority for any one of the three services, so if one of the services needs additional funds for something, where there is a breakthrough, they can go to the Secretary of Defense and get whatever is necessary out of that $135 million. . . . As I have indicated, the Secretary of Defense or his assistants have promised the committee that the Jupiter money for fiscal 1958, which I think totals about $35 million, will be available out of that emergency fund."

ICAF Correspondence Course Made Available

The Industrial College of the Armed Forces, one of the three Joint educational institutions of the Department of Defense, wishes to call attention to the Correspondence Course which it offers to Regular and Reserve Officers, National Guard Officers, and to civilian executives both in industry and government. This extension course "Emergency Management of the National Economy," is designed to reach the civilian community and those members of the military services who cannot attend the Resident Course conducted by the Industrial College of the Armed Forces.

Those who wish to enroll may communicate directly with the Correspondence Study Branch, Industrial College of the Armed Forces, Washington 25, D. C. A prospectus will be forwarded which outlines the eligibility requirements and includes an application form and necessary instructions.

U. S. Army

New Army Commanders

COL. JAMES J. HATCH, USA, who rose from first lieutenant to lieutenant colonel from 1942 to 1945, while serving with the 101st Airborne Division, and who made colonel as a member of the "Screaming Eagles" last July, has been given command of the 2d Airborne Battle Group, 187th Infantry, replacing Col. Melvin Zais, USA.

LT. COL. GUS W. SCHLITZKUS, USA, heads the Field Equipment and Special Projects Department of the Infantry Board at Ft. Benning, Ga., replacing Col. Lester L. Wheeler, USA, reassigned to Washington, D. C.

COL. STANLEY SAWICKI, USA, Professor of Military Science and Tactics at Purdue University, congratulates Cadet Jon Teifer as he completed his last flight in the 35-hour Purdue Army ROTC flight training program. Ten other senior students in the Army ROTC also successfully completed the program.

New 'Copter Pilots

The second class to graduate from the U. S. Army Primary Helicopter School received diplomas last week at Camp Wolters, Tex. Col. John L. Inskeep, USA, is Commanding Officer and Commandant of the Helicopter School.

Thirty-seven graduates, including one warrant officer, heard an address by Col. Wayne E. Downing, USA, Assistant Commandant of the Helicopter School.

The School, begun last fall, consists of a 20-week course for enlisted men. It is set up primarily for enlisted men, although officers below major, and warrant officers are accepted by the school.

The 20-week course consists of two phases. Phase I is four weeks long and is of the officer candidate school type. Officers and warrant officers do not go through Phase I.

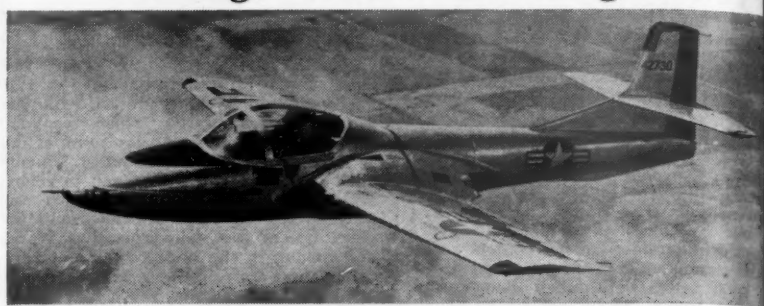

Phase II, the actual flight school, is for 16 weeks. Flight instruction at Camp Wolters is on a contract basis. Southern Airways Company, with home offices in Birmingham, Ala., holds the contract.

Phase III, advanced flight training, is given at Ft. Rucker, Ala. Enlisted men graduating from Ft. Rucker are appointed as warrant officers.

Warrant Officer Candidate Cosby E. Vining, was named the top scholastic student in the graduating class. Candidates Loren N. Foster, and Ronald B. Gilsdorf, second and third respectively.

GRADUATING WERE CWO-2 Ralph E. Domenic and Warrant Officer Candidates Martin L. Autrey, Robert E. Beebe, Juan Benitez-Torres, William H. Cleary, Theodor M. Cross, Warren L. Curtis, Joseph P. ## Army Pilots Will Get Jet Transition Training; Evaluate Twin-Engine T-37A

TWIN JET T-37A, now in volume production for the Air Force as a primary jet trainer. Three will be lent to the Army for evaluation tests.

WICHITA, KANS.

THE United States Army will soon be flying Cessna Aircraft Company's T-37A twin-jet that has been developed for the Air Force as a jet basic trainer.

Cessna officials told members of the Aviation Writers Association, visiting here that the Army will start an evaluation program to investigate the possibilities of using the T-37A. The Army will investigate its suitability for photo reconnaissance, artillery observation, and other missions in support of ground forces.

A transition course is scheduled to train a limited number of Army pilots for jet flying. The trained jet pilots in turn will perform the evaluation tests of the T-37A.

Under the suitability evaluation program, the Army is expected to use three T-37A's on loan from the Air Force for about two years. Cessna officials believe the T-37 with its side-by-side seating concept should be well adapted to Army liaison and reconnaissance work.

The first Army pilot transition course will get underway at the Cessna Propeller Plant on 4 June with a second class scheduled for 25 June. Four pilots will be instructed in each class which will include 60 hours of ground systems instruction and a 20 hour flying course.

In addition to the eight pilots in the two courses, four Army maintenance men will assist the support teams in order to become familiar with ground support and maintenance. The course will conclude about 25 July.

Army Opportunities

LANGUAGE TRAINING — The Army has set a "desired goal" of providing language training for all officers having the aptitude and who volunteer. AR 350-4 encourages officers not already proficient in one foreign language to volunteer, says that commanders will review qualification records annually, reminding officers not possessing a language proficiency about the program "until a notation of language proficiency or lack of aptitude for such training has been entered on the officers DA Form 66."

NUCLEAR POWER PROGRAM — A maximum of 25 enlisted men will be chosen for training in the operation of nuclear power plants in a one-year course at Ft. Belvoir, Va., starting 15 January 1958. Circular 621-7 says applicants must be in Grade E-4 or higher.

MEDICAL POSTGRADUATE COURSES — Circular 621-5 lists professional postgraduate courses for Medical Service officers during fiscal year '58, including courses in Management of Mass Casualties from employment of nuclear weapons and Principles of Medical Operations in Nuclear Warfare.

COMMISSION IN MSC—Col. Bernard Label, USA, Chief of the Medical Service Corps, has announced a new commissioning program in the corps for fiscal year 1958, for scientific, professional and technical specialists. Qualified applicants will receive commissions in the Army Reserve, in grades from second lieutenant through captain, and will serve an initial period of active duty of three years. Those who possess a Ph.D. degree in sciences allied to medicine will be eligible for a two year initial tour of duty.

Chaplain Decker Given Award Of Appreciation

Chaplain Silas E. Decker, USA, Second U. S. Army Chaplain, received an Award of Appreciation from the Military Chaplains Association of the United States, at Ft. Meade, Md., 4 June.

The award was "in recognition of Chaplain Decker's outstanding qualities of leadership in Chaplain activities and support of the Military Chaplains Association."

RADM. Maurice Sheehy, Chaplain's Corps, USNR, presented the award at a luncheon with Lt. Gen. Charles E. Hart, USA, Commanding General, Second U. S. Army, the guest speaker.

Army Sets Global Plans For Trainfire; "Punchy Pete" Will Be Kept Busy

Plans for Army-wide implementation of Trainfire, a new method of teaching rifle marksmanship have been developed at Headquarters, U. S. Continental Army Command, Ft. Monroe, Va.

Active Army installations within the Continental United States will be the first to build Trainfire ranges with priority going to Army training centers and the U. S. Army Infantry School.

Ft. Jackson, S. C. already has contracted for the expansion of range facilities for the changeover from the conventional method of rifle instruction on known distance ranges to Trainfire.

Basically, Trainfire shifts the emphasis in rifle marksmanship from the weapon to the man without changing the primary goal: to hit the target with the bullet. It is an attempt to teach rifle shooting to trainees under conditions that simulate combat as closely as safety factors will permit.

To accomplish this, Trainfire uses "Punchy Pete," a camouflaged, pasteboard, silhouette, electronic pop-up target that falls if struck by a bullet. Target realism is increased by giving "Punchy Pete" a coat of olive drab paint and then exposing him briefly at irregular intervals and at unknown distances to the trainees in the field.

Trainfire is the result of an extensive study by the Human Resources Research Office, an agency of George Washington University under contract with the Army to do research in the combat arms. The U. S. Army Infantry Human Research Unit at Ft. Benning, undertook to test Trainfire in 1954.

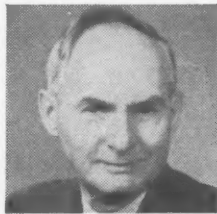

It is expected that by 1959 implementation will be complete within the Continental United States. By 1960 all overseas commands will have Trainfire ranges. By 1961 Reserve Forces will have been serviced with Trainfire facilities.

They have been with us for fifty years

Telephone men and women have always been one of the greatest assets of the business. Many have been with us a long time and have found it a pleasant place to be.

As many as 291,100 have ten, twenty, thirty, forty or more years of service. Some, as shown above, have served the public and their companies for half a century.

Singly and together they can say . . . "I have been part of a useful enterprise. My work has helped to make it grow."

It is the sum of all this experience—in research, manufacturing and operation—that helps you to have good service today and provides the solid foundation for still greater things to come.

Secretary Gates Opposes Navy Budget Cut; Sees Some Programs "Seriously Impaired"

Navy Secretary Thomas S. Gates, Jr., says the Navy "cannot absorb" the House cuts in the Navy-Marine Corps budget "without seriously impairing certain programs."

Appearing before the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on the Defense Department, Secretary Gates said the savings to be gained from price reductions in the House bill "cannot be realized, particularly in the procurement programs for aircraft and for the construction of ships."

He said "The costs of building aircraft and ships have risen since the budget estimates were formulated," and "It will not be possible to procure the ships and aircraft programmed this year or in prior years if original budget estimates are reduced."

Secretary Gates added that "Any cutbacks of ships or aircraft will impair our future military readiness."

The 6th and 12th Marine Corps Reserve and Recruitment Districts took all honors in the 1957 Marine Corps Reserve "Technique of Instruction Competition."

Top honors went to S/Sgt. Rodney C. Dalgo, USMCR, of the 6th District's 2d 105mm Howitzer Battery, Jackson, Miss. In second place was Sgt. Lawrence L. Hunt, USMCR, 1st Air Delivery Co., 12th District, San Jose, Calif.

Third and fourth places went to S/Sgt. Thomas J. Smith, USMCR, 15th Rifle Company, Seal Beach, Calif., and S/Sgt. Joseph W. Vincent, USMCR, 3d 105mm Howitzer Battalion, Birmingham, Ala.

Parris Island Theater Will Have "Crying Room"

A new $335,000 theater at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S. C., is scheduled for completion within the next 10 months.

The Depot Public Works Officer has opened bids for construction of the building which is to be built on the Boulevard de France near the Provost Marshal Office. The theater will seat 1,000 persons and be the most modern in the Marine Corps. The air-conditioned building will have a wide screen and complete stage facilities, including dressing rooms.

An unusual feature is a "crying room" for children.

Soviets Building Big Navy To Cut U. S. Off From Allies, Ass't Sec. Norton Charges

ST. LOUIS, MO.

WHILE Soviet officials are publically downgrading sea power, they are at the same time building a tremendous navy designed to cut us off from our friends in event of trouble, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air Garrison Norton, charged in an address to members of the Aviation Writers' Association here.

"The Kremlin planner," Mr. Norton said, "looking out from his citadel in Moscow, views the Free World as a great confederation. The heart of this confederation is the United States—located in the midst of a huge World ocean—connected to its allies in Europe and Asia and to its overseas air bases by sea communications.

"Now, the Soviets understand land strategy. They know that in attacking a land objective they cut it off first—and then destroy it. They could therefore very likely be thinking in the same terms as they eye their potential victims in Western Europe and the fringes of Asia. Cut them off from United States help, and then capture them."

The Navy Assistant Secretary cited the recent growth of the Red Navy which, he said, has jumped from seventh to second place among the world's fleets in the past decade.

"They already operate by far the largest submarine fleet the world has ever known, some 500 modern undersea craft," he said, "and they are turning out more at the rate of three every two weeks. Their submarine development emphasizes the so-called 'W' class, capable of operations throughout the world. "Nor have they neglected other components of a modern deep-sea Navy. They now have 25 modern cruisers and 130 modern destroyers. The shore-based Red naval air arm has some 3,000 jet planes, featuring latest model 'Mig' fighters and 'Bosun' light bombers. Soviet authorities have announced plans for two 30,000 to 40,000-ton nuclear-powered vessels, and there is reason to believe they have undertaken an even more extensive atomic ship-building program. It is clear that the Soviets are very busy indeed creating their own alternatives, in the field of naval power, to their capabilities in the field of air power.

"They have something in mind besides touching off a nuclear exchange between population centers. They see other opportunities for the application of military force that offer a better return for the risk. Their psychological warfare objective could very well be to encourage us in the United States to so concentrate upon the concept of a nuclear exchange as to overlook these other possibilities."

Navy Expands Campus Program For Sailors

The University of Washington in Seattle, will participate in the Navy's Enlisted Advanced School Program this year in addition to Purdue University at Lafayette, Ind.

A selection board has chosen 100 enlisted men to enter the college program this year. They will report to the Naval Preparatory School at the Naval Training Center in Bainbridge, Md., or the Naval Training Center at San Diego, Calif., in June before entering college in the fall.

Personnel selected for this program attend school for two years and then join the fleet for four. After four years with the fleet, they become eligible to complete the four-year college education if qualified in all other respects.

Army Navy Air Force Journal 7
8 June 1957 (Vol. 94, P. 1223)

SUPPOSE YOU HAD TO COUNT 8 MILLION 730 THOUSAND DOLLARS

You'll have to admit it's a lot of money. During 1956 nearly 300,000 members of USAA joyfully counted their portion of this total that was returned to them in liberal savings on their automobile insurance.

Every year officers of the U.S. Armed Forces, a preferred risk group*, save big money on USAA automobile insurance. Currently stateside members are saving 36% from standard rates.

Such liberal savings are possible because USAA operates as a non-profit association, managed and directed by active and retired officers of the U.S. Armed Forces. No salesmen are employed nor are any commissions paid. Selling is done by mail.

Attorneys and claims adjusters are near at hand throughout the United States and in the foreign areas served by USAA to quickly and fairly serve members in the event of an accident.

USAA has been serving the services since 1922. So, when it's time to insure—insure with confidence—give yourself the best, and save too. Insure with USAA!

No matter whether you are stateside, or overseas, USAA is as close as your nearest mailbox, telephone or telegraph office. Your USAA insurance becomes effective as of postmarked time of application, unless a later date is specified.

UNITED SERVICES AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION

Charles E. Cheever, Colonel, USA - Retired, President

* Membership in USAA is limited to active and retired officers, cadets and warrant officers of the U. S. Army, Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Public Health Service, Coast and Geodetic Survey; officers and warrant officers of the National Guard and Reserve when ordered to extended active Federal duty, (afterwards in civilian life they may continue or later renew their insurance, so long as they retain their commissions or warrants in the National Guard or Reserve); the widows of such officers and warrant officers so long as their status is not changed by remarriage.

USAA operates in the United States, its possessions and territories; Canada, Cuba and the Canal Zone; Japan, the Philippines, and certain U. S. bases in the Pacific, as well as in Western Continental Europe.

Naval Dental School Programs Color TV

The first professional color television program produced by the U. S. Naval Dental School, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., recently was shown to 50 Navy Dental Officers by Capt. J. V. Niiranen, DC, USN, Head, Training Aids Department.

The one-hour program was the first of a series which will be produced by the School to enhance the teaching program. The program was projected to the School from Walter Reed Army Institute of Research by closed circuit microwave.

Featured were demonstrations by Capt. D. E. Cooksey, DC, USN, on "Extra-Oral Needle Insertion Techniques of Local Anesthesia"; Capt. H. J. Towle, Jr., DC, USN, on "Management of an Obstructed Airway"; and Cdr. R. B. Weldon, DC, USN, on "Maxillofacial Prosthesis."

Around the AF

COL. GEORGE G. SIMLER, USAF, 36, Commander of the 355th Fighter Group at Knoxville, Tenn., a former University of Maryland football end, this summer succeeds Col. Robert V. Whitlow, USAF, as Director of Athletics at the USAF Academy. Colonel Simler served during WWII with the 322d Medium Bomb Group, whose commander, Robert M. Stillman, is now a Brigadier General and Commandant of Cadets at the Academy.

MAJ. GEN. ARCHIE J. OLD, JR., USAF, Fifteenth Air Force Commander, March AFB, Calif., has received the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit for "outstanding service" as Director of Operations for SAC from 15 May 1953 to 9 August 1955. He commanded the non-stop global flight of three B-52's, covering 24,325 miles in 45 hours 19 minutes.

BRIG. GEN. J. STANLEY HOLTNER, USAF, also has received the Legion of Merit for "outstanding service" as Commander of the Flight Test Center at Edwards AFB, Calif., from 13 Feb. 1952 to 20 May 1957. He has been assigned to the Third Air Force in England.

COL. ELMER G. PROHASKA, USAF, who has been at AMC Headquarters, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, since June 1953, most recently as Executive to General E. W. Rawlings, USAF, AMC Commander, will become Director of Plans and Programs for Air Material Force, Pacific Area, in June at Wheeler AFB, Hawaii.

MAJ. GEN. RUSSELL L. WALDRON, USAF, has assumed command of the MATS Continental Division at Kelly Air Force Base, Texas. He succeeds Maj. Gen. Brooke E. Allen, USAF, who will command the Sixth Allied Tactical Air Force, a unit of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, with headquarters at Izmir, Turkey. General Waldron comes to his new MATS assignment from Tachikawa Air Base, Japan, where he commanded the 315th Air Division.

COL. VALENTINE A. RUTHERFORD, USAF, has been appointed Comptroller for the continental Air Command at Mitchel AFB, N. Y. He will arrive in July from Robins AFB, Ga., to replace Col. R. I. Fletcher, USAF, scheduled to attend the Industrial College.

AIR FORCE ACADEMY athletic teams won 89 contests, lost 64 and had four ties during the pioneer 1956-57 varsity season; the football record was 6-2-1; best achievements were in rifle competitions, where 23 wins were scored against 9 losses.

DAGGER AND THE DART

The "Delta Dagger" and the "Delta Dart" are the new official names of two of the Air Forces latest all-weather fighter interceptors.

The Convair F-102 supersonic interceptor, assigned to the Air Defense Command's operational units in 1956 becomes the "Delta Dagger," and the newer supersonic Convair F-106, now in production for future assignment to ADC will be the "Delta Dart."

The delta wing interceptors have the "coke bottle" or pinched waist fuselage and are armed with air-to-air missiles.

The F-106 will have the most advanced electronic fire control system and armament ever developed for an Air Force interceptor, the Pentagon said. It was first flown on December 26, 1956.

In a departure from the usual single name designation, for its aircraft, the Air Force added the "delta" prefix, based on the configuration of these first models of aircraft design, the delta wing.

LT. COL. MARVIN D. ALEXANDER, Col. Phil B. Cage, and Maj. Hal B. Sims officiate at Lackland AFB cake-cutting marking third anniversary of the Air Force recruiting course. Col. Alexander is the course's founder-director, Col. Cage heads the base group administering the school, and Maj. Sims is the present director of the course which has graduated 1,992 students since the Air Force began a separate recruiting service.

Confirm Senior AF Generals

The Senate has confirmed the nominations of the following Air Force officers:

To General

Lt Gen Frank F. Everest
Lt Gen Thomas S. Power

To Lt Gen

Maj Gen William E. Hall
Maj Gen Walter E. Todd
Maj Gen John K. Gerhart

M/Sgt. Bachetti Earns 1956 Cheney Award

M/Sgt. Leonard J. Bachetti, USAF, of the 1608th Flight Line Maintenance Squadron, 1608th Maintenance Group, Charleston AFB, S. C., has been named recipient of the 1956 Cheney Award for valor and extreme fortitude in rescuing survivors from the flaming wreckage of a C-124 cargo plane.

On 3 Oct. 1956, the Sergeant was the first to reach the scene of a crash at the Air Base. He climbed aboard the burning plane and led two dazed airmen to safety. Despite the heat and danger of imminent explosion, he twice re-entered the plane to rescue two other men who were trapped in the wreck.

Maj. Otis Cited For Safety

Maj. James Otis, USAF, Director of Safety for the 4060th Air Refueling Wing at Dow AFB, Me., has been awarded SAC's April flying safety officer of the month honors.

Among his many contributions to Dow's flying safety: an aircraft wing safety line to prevent falls from the wing by maintenance personnel; a recorder attached to his phone to allow round-the-clock reporting of hazardous conditions; and a simple, practical, inexpensive lighted runway distance marker.

Greater Speed And Accuracy Required In Modern War, Gen. Lindsay Tells AWA

Maj. Gen. Lindsay

St. Louis, Mo. MODERN advances in weapons and technology are putting increasing pressure upon the Air Force for greater speed and accuracy with fewer combat sorties, Maj. Gen. Richard C. Lindsay, USAF, Assistant to the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations, told the Aviation Writers Association at a luncheon given here by the Gas Turbine Division of the General Electric Co. (General Lindsay will soon go to Europe as Commander Allied Air Forces Southern Europe.)

"The basic weapon systems of the Air Force," he declared, "are designed to apply firepower against an enemy in the shortest span of time that is technically feasible. However, the actual values of specific weapons are in proportion to the rate at which they can be employed effectively in the missions for which they are designated."

"On-Target Certainty Rate"

"In the case of general war, the on-target certainty rate of long-range delivery systems would be paramount. That is to say, our survival would depend upon the speed with which we could destroy or neutralize the enemy's offensive capabilities in strategic operations."

Declaring that we have never faced the same kind of situation before, General Lindsay recalled World War II when we flew 754,818 bomber sorties and 991,750 fighter sorties over a period of two-and-a-half years with the RAC flying 687,462 bomber sorties and 1,695,049 fighter sorties.

"There was time then," he said, "for us to try out new weapons and tactics and to correct the things that went wrong. Nothing like World War II, either as to time or quantity, can be contemplated in the present circumstances."

"A Gigantic Squeeze"

"Now," he continued, "with supersonic mobility and nuclear firepower at hand, success means getting the job done faster with fewer combat sorties that accomplish more. It is a gigantic squeeze, in that as the numbers involved continue to grow less, the demand for 100 per cent, failproof performance in the fewer that are used becomes vastly greater. With survival depending on this on-target certainty at a required rate, the critical role of the delivery system vehicles is increased tremendously."

"Our concept of strategic air warfare does not include the mass raid philosophies of World War II. Instantaneous action now is the key. Some portion of our air forces stand strip alert at all times. Each squadron has its own war plans which it could carry out as ordered. Each combat crew in these SAC units knows its targets and alternates."

As for conventional aircraft, he said, a lot of our SAC and TAC crews have actual combat experience while all have the benefit of vast realistic training all over the free world. But that is not true of guided missiles where we are "still very much in the beginning stage."

Missiles Bring Problems

Problems in the guided missile field, he declared, do not end when the relatively few development models have been okayed and an item is cleared for production. "You can bet," he declared, "they will bring problems with them."

General Lindsay pointed out that, unlike TAC and SAC crews, missile crews are likely to be tied down to the narrow confines of launching sites but yet must always keep themselves constantly at the peak of alertness.

"I believe you will agree," he said, "that the difficulties inherent in keeping individuals at the peak of alertness for extended periods of time in relatively remote locations could very well add up to a big problem."

"How will the missile crews get the kind of experience that makes the combat air crew mission minded and keeps the individual keen for his job?"

Firing Experience?

"Simulators can give the missile crew a great deal of valuable training, but can they provide the individual with anything to equal actual experience with firepower?"

"If not, how far is it possible to go without actual firing experience, particularly with some of the larger missiles?"

"Can all crews have the experience of firing? And if not, what would be the risk, in a war crisis, of depending on combat crews who had never fired the weapon for which they are responsible and had never had a chance to see its effects?"

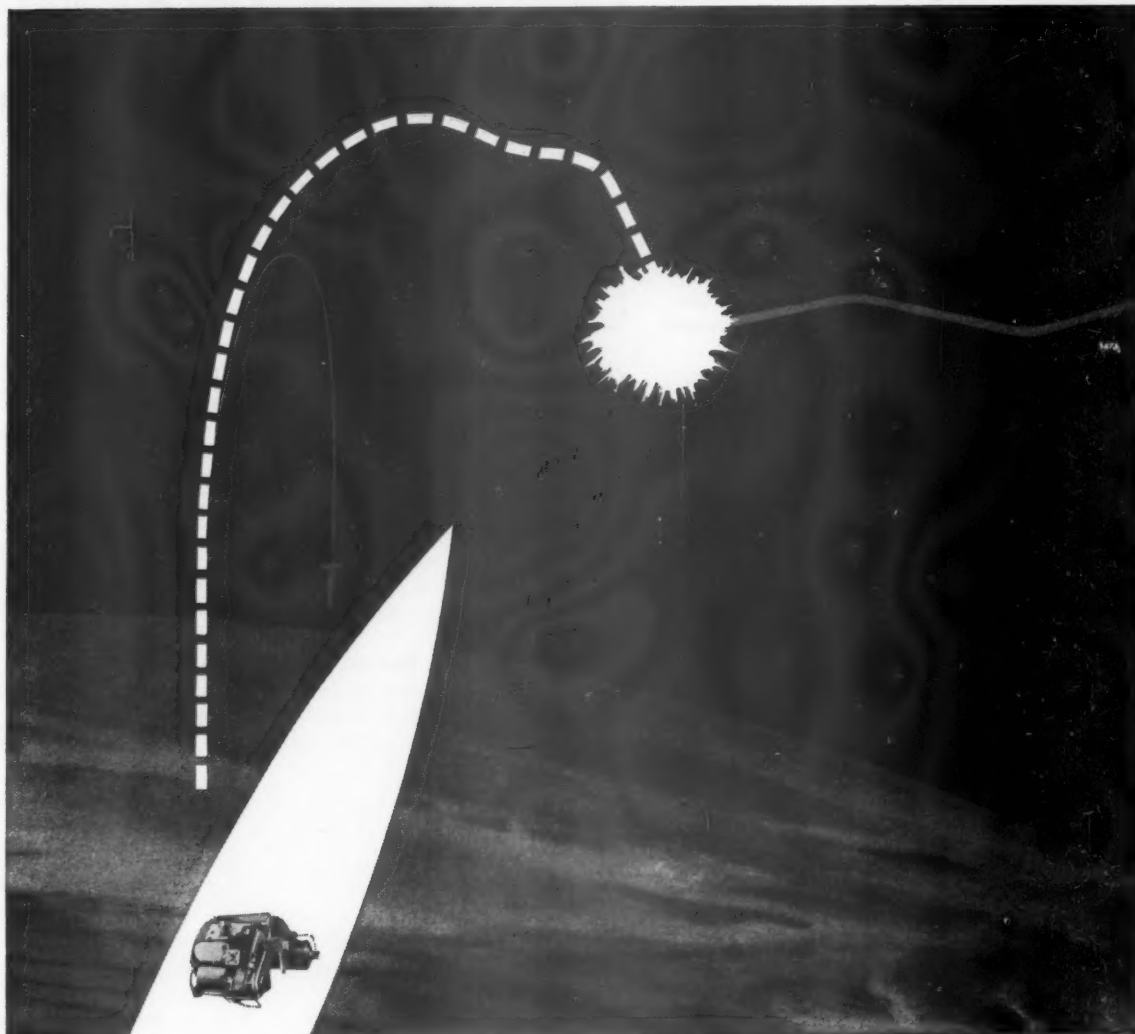

Maintenance, too, General Lindsay said, will add problems to the guided missile era. "There are some 300,000 parts in an average missile," he pointed out. "In order to be mechanically reliable, missiles must successfully meet stringent operating conditions created by tremendous G forces, vibration, great variations in temperature, and other extremes. I will leave to your own estimate the scope and seriousness of the maintenance and supply problems."

8 June 1957 (Vol. 94, P. 1225)

AF Opportunities

INSTRUMENT PILOT SCHOOL—Commanders are instructed in AFR 53-12 to inform all commissioned pilots about instrument pilot training; among the requirements, at least two years service as a military pilot and a minimum of 650 hours as a first pilot, with 20 hours of hooded and/or weather experience.

For the "killing" demands of accessory power...

AMF has experience you can use

• No part of a missile is more important than the power supply that directs it to the "kill". And AMF has produced more gas turbine power units for guided missiles than any other source. • Typical AMF systems produce up to 50 hp.—with modifications, up to 200 hp.—at durations from 20 seconds to many hours. They are completely independent of the main power plant, insensitive to missile attitude or altitude, and to environment, acceleration, shock, or vibration. • Units offer multiple start-stop flexibility, precise frequency and voltage control, and can be packaged to fit practically any space arrangement, with little size and low weight. • See for yourself why, in accessory missile power as in a variety of other highly specialized fields, AMF has experience you can use.

"The Great Shield of Our Nation." The Secretary of the Army, Mr. Wilber M. Brucker, made strong and telling points against the current slashing of the defense budget in his address 3 June to the Association of Graduates at West Point.

"Some are becoming weary," he said, "of the need to exert our best efforts at the very time we have convinced Soviet Russia of our earnestness and determination to prevent its evil designs from succeeding. At the moment when America is ready to bargain with the Soviets for genuine disarmament from a position of strength there are those who would reduce our military strength for the sake of a few dollars. Our military power for peace—the great shield of our Nation—is again being threatened in the name of economy."

Secretary Brucker cited these as "lessons of false economy" reflected from the past:

- Just prior to World War I we had let down our defenses, and we were not ready to fight when we were drawn into that conflict.
- Then came a period when we again let down our defenses—and we had to fight World War II.
- Following that, we said we would never make the same mistake again. But we were not ready to fight in Korea when the communist conspiracy challenged the Free World with armed might.

"History tells us," Mr. Brucker pointed out, "that if we had been ready for these struggles, they might have been averted. Certainly if we had been ready the cost of victory would have been far less."

Terming the economy as of the "meat-axe variety," the Secretary asked "What comforts and luxuries could we possibly buy for today with the money chopped ruthlessly from our defense which could compensate for the horrors we would experience in war?"

The Secretary advised that our people should be counseled to think twice before they join those who would cripple our National Defense. Each of us in his own sphere should make sure that all with whom we come into contact understand the issues, and realize that it is not just dollars that are at stake in the drive to chop our austere military and mutual security budgets, but the lives of all of us, and the future of our country.

Would that these pungent facts could be brought home in Congress strong enough to overcome the illusion of tax cutting!

Welcome, Academy Graduates. All of the military Services—the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, and Coast Guard—are enriched this month as the annual graduating classes at West Point, Annapolis, and New London are commissioned in the Regular Services. As in the past, a portion of the U. S. Military Academy and U. S. Naval Academy graduates are given commissions in the Air Force—135 from West Point and 217 from Annapolis. Meanwhile the Air Force's own Academy is completing its second year at its temporary location at Lowry AFB, Denver, Colo., while construction at its permanent site, Colorado Springs, is under way. Soon, too, it will be adding its output of dedicated young men to the defense of the nation.

The Services have long since outgrown the size when the Academies could furnish a large portion of the Commissioned officers in their Regular corps. Today young men from every walk of life fill the commissioned grades — many from the civilian colleges and universities, many from civilian pursuits through the Reserve organizations, and numbers awarded direct commissions as the result of outstanding enlisted service.

But the Academies, organized as they are for the purpose, and with the ideals and traditions

Unknown Soldier's Honor Guard

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Thanks so much for putting my letter about the Honor Guard for the Unknown Soldier, in your 18 May issue. You really spanned time and space in the case of these two who were there—a continent and almost 36 years. I have received letters from these two men: John C. Asbury, 408 Chestnut St., Doniphan, Mo., and John E. Caldwell, 981 Camp Drive, Ocala, Fla.

Both of these men I remember well. Sgt. Caldwell was the right guide in the Company for the Cemetery, but I cannot recall just where Sgt. Asbury was in the ranks. Both men are interested in the attempt to organize a reunion. Sgt. Caldwell told me that the Ass't Commandant of Marines Maj. Gen. McGee was also there in the Marine unit. Sgt. Asbury gave me quite a lot of information which will be a great deal of help.

So far I have determined the fate of some 40 odd of the men. There are a number of them which will be easy to find, but there are some that will take a lot of finding. It is my hope to find all the living and to determine the fate of all of them. Again I thank you for your kindness in putting the letter in.

"Forgotten Men"

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I would like to write a few lines in behalf of "the forgotten men," namely, the World War I group of retired officers.

The Pay Readjustment Act of 1942 granted to this group of officers 75 per cent of their active duty pay at the time of their retirement. Prior to enactment of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, both active and retired officers had their pay computed on one basic pay rate. It is presumed that the Congress of 1942 did not foresee any change in this custom,—that they intended this group of officers to have 75 per cent of the prevailing basic pay rate. However, they were prevented from doing so by the new law. In spite of the tradition that Congress does not reduce retired pay, the pay of this group has been reduced 50 per cent through inflation. Thus, their pay has been reduced in fact, if not in figures.

The opposition of the Defense Department to the bills introduced in Congress to amend the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942 so that the retired pay of any officer who served prior to November 12, 1918, shall be 75 per cent of his active duty pay under the new pay bill may stem from the disinclination of the Department to favor three-fourths retirement pay for any reason other than thirty years of service.

The World War I group of officers did not receive any constructive service credits regardless of their age and experience. Instead, many of them were deprived of previously granted retirement credits upon which they had based their future plans. I served six years as a second lieutenant, and four years as a first lieutenant,—a total of ten years in the grade of lieutenant. I served 17 years of full time active commissioned military service before acquiring the rank of major. Compare this with an officer integrated under the new law who may be commissioned a major; and, less than ten years later, retire in the grade of colonel with 30 years service under the new pay bill. This might point up a question: Should retirement benefits smack of niggardliness toward one group, and lavish generosity toward another?

It is conceivable that the Defense Department would have no opposition to enactment of legislation granting to those retired individuals of the World War I group of officers having over 15 years of full time active military service, sufficient constructive service to complete their thirty years for retirement pay purposes under the proposed bill.

QUOTES FROM THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago (7 June 1947)—It is gratifying to note that as the perspective of the war increases, and pride in performance is softening the grief for those who died and dimming the suffering, hardships and discomforts which service imposed, there is emerging general understanding of the greatness of the professional military leadership the country evolved when its life and interests were at stake. We hear less and less of brass and gold braid, more and more of the view expressed by General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower in his able address to the graduates of West Point, that "the true soldier of America is a leader for world cooperation, knowing that to serve best the security of his country he must work for the cause of peace."

50 Years Ago (8 June 1907)—Colonel Goethals, chief engineer of the Panama Canal, cabled Secretary Taft this week a report on the work of excavation during the month of May. It shows a decrease as compared with the returns for March and April, but the amount was 690,365 cubic yards, as compared with 194,645 for the same month last year. In fact, the work for May just past was the third largest for any month since excavation began under the auspices of the United States officials.

90 Years Ago (8 June 1867)—The Indian hostilities for 1867, which the peace-prophets have been so long pooh-poohing as unlikely to happen, have now begun in earnest—not, indeed, in any formidable campaigning, for that the military topography of the region and the Indian strength forbid, but in a series of petty shootings, scalplings and plunderings.

TAKE A TENNIS RACKET, SAYS CHIEF OF STAFF

General Taylor, a crack tennis player, advised the USMA '58 graduates to take a tennis racket with them in reporting to a station, although he suggested that there are "acceptable substitutes such as golf clubs, squash rackets and handball gloves."

The Chief of Staff said that officers also should be equipped with an accurate wrist watch, because "the Army expects you to be on time," and a pocket note book to "show that you intend to let slip no useful thought or lawful order into the limbo of forgotten things."

THE TENNIS RACKET, he said, "would be an indication that you intend to retain that physical fitness which West Point has given you and which is the indispensable attribute of the fighting man."

General Taylor told the new lieutenants he hopes that they will include "in your freight . . . an easy chair and an appropriate reading lamp."

"As an officer in this modern Army, your days of study are not over—you will always have homework to do. The subjects of study and the hours you devote will largely be of your own determination. The content of this self-imposed curriculum is not so important provided it assures that your mind never ceases to develop. Your academic standing on graduation today is important as a measure of achievement in a difficult course of study covering the past four years. It is by no means a final determination of your worth to the Service, or of your eventual success."

"TOO MANY 'GOATS' have risen to the heights of distinction to suggest that today's order of merit is final. But the goats of my acquaintance who have leapedfrogged their classmates are men who continued their intellectual growth after graduation. Like physical fitness, you can never afford to put aside the habits of mental fitness which you have learned here as cadets."

The General concluded:

"As my time is running short, I shall suggest only one last bit of gear for your graduate's hope chest. Take along a material reminder of West Point—the coat of arms, a picture of the Plain with the Chapel rising aloft, a copy of the Cadet Prayer to hang on the wall. Some such token may serve you well at a time of discouragement when you are finding life in the Service at variance with what you learned here. As Superintendent, I often received letters from young graduates conveying a tone of disillusionment over the absence in a world of things as-they-are of the "honest dealing and clean thinking" inculcated at West Point. Perhaps the Academy itself must accept some responsibility for such a frame of mind."

"THE CORPS OF CADETS is an unusual society deliberately designed to foster character and leadership. In a sense, the cadets live in a laboratory which operates under special conditions to accomplish special purposes. The Army, by contrast, is a cross-section of America, an unconditioned environment neither better nor worse in its individual members than the Nation from which they are drawn."

"The virtues taught at West Point are the virtues of the good people whom you will find in the Service. In an ideal world they would be the ideals of all people. In the world-as-it-is, they are in desperate need of propagation."

CIVILIAN AND MILITARY LEADERS of all the Services in their public statements currently are playing down massive destructive capabilities of land, sea and "measured force." At the Aviation Writers Association convention (The Journal 25 May and 1 June), Navy and Air Force speakers stressed the ability of each of these Services to provide economic military striking power. ASST. NAVY SEC'Y GARRISON NORTON said "The Navy furnishes the free world with a means of applying politically acceptable power where it is needed, tailored to meet the occasion. . ."

GENERAL O. P. WEYLAND, head of TAC, told the Aviation Writers how tactical airpower, forged into "composite air strike forces," can supplement SAC's deterrent power for full-scale war by providing an answer to the threat of "brush fire" wars. "The power, mobility and flexibility of these forces," said General Weyland, "constitute a weapon system with an entirely new order of efficiency and the ability to deal with any situation that may present itself."

A NEW BALLISTIC MISSILE EQUATION was put before the Aviation Writers Association meeting in Kansas City by VAdm. W. V. Davis, jr., USN. It is: IRBM PLUS SHIPS EQUAL ICBM. In the not too distant future, he said, submarines can load FBMs (Fleet Ballistic Missiles) in the U. S. or at sea and can then steam to a launching spot completely and continuously submerged. Through an extremely accurate system of navigation they can pin point their positions on the globe without surfacing and can launch FBMs with remarkable accuracy.

THE ARMY'S CASE for its ability to handle any kind of a situation was stated anew this week by CofS Taylor. He told a West Point graduation audience that "the Army is prepared to deal with small wars, the so-called 'brush fires' which may spring up without warning. We are particularly impressed," said General Taylor, "with the growing need for this kind of readiness. In the present bipolar world in which the principal adversaries are armed with high yield weapons of great destructiveness, it is of the utmost importance to maintain mobile strategic reserves of Army forces ready to suppress any 'brush fire' quickly before it can spread into the great nuclear conflagration which it is our purpose to avoid."

ANOTHER INTERESTING ASPECT of CofS Taylor's West Point speech was his remark that "every soldier in uniform is ready to provide emergency aid to civilian defense in the event of an atomic disaster." This is an obvious fact, of course, but in the past Pentagon leaders generally have avoided linking military personnel directly to civil defense activities.

CURRENT DISARMAMENT TALKS undoubtedly will temper further public statements about SAC's hydrogen bomb force, the Navy's growing strategic bombing capability and the Army's ability to lay down devastating atomic firepower. Instead, there will be more and more talk about "politically acceptable power," about "an entirely new order of efficiency," and about quick suppression of brush fires.

THE ARMY WILL CELEBRATE its 182d birthday on 14 June with ceremonies throughout the world so designed as not to conflict with Armed Forces Day activities. Army Circular 365-2 tells how this is to be achieved, points out that "no Army Birthday could be properly celebrated without a military parade." Suggestion is made that the Resolution of the Continental Congress, 14 June 1775, establishing the Army, be read with a retreat or similar parade. That resolution set the pay of a captain at 20 dollars per month; 13 1/3 dollars for a lieutenant and 6 2/3 dollars for a private.

COMPETITIVE BIDDING on the more important types of contracts may fall by the wayside under the increasing pressure of getting things done quickly, Maj. Gen. R. C. Lindsay, USAF, told the aviation writers last week. (See story page 9.) "I can imagine circumstances," he said, "in which the need for the item would be too urgent to permit bidding. The time lag would be unacceptable. And there would be no alternative to straight-line contracting procedures, with speed the Number One consideration."

THE AIR FORCE ASSOCIATION was selected for the Public Relations Award of the Aviation Writers Association at its convention in St. Louis. Accepting the award for the AFA was Mr. John F. Loosbrock, Managing Editor of AFA's "Air Force Magazine." AFA, through its annual conventions and industry conferences, has done an outstanding job of telling the public what is going on in aviation and what the problems are.

THE ARMY AVIATION SCHOOL at Ft. Rucker, Ala., is training Civil Aeronautics Administration technical representatives on helicopter instrument flying. The CAA is drafting rules for civilian 'copter instrument flying.

PRESS REPORTS that SAC was being forced to curtail B-52 training because of budget restrictions are denied at the Pentagon. However, the Air Force concedes that "it has been necessary to reduce flying training hours for B-47 aircrews," adds that full flying training will be resumed after 30 June. THE B-52 TRAINING PROGRAM has graduated an aviation pioneer, Col. Robert B. Hurley, USAF, Deputy Commander of the 92d Bombardment Wing at Fairchild AFB, Wash., who has logged over 12,000 hours since 1928. The 92d is converting from B-36's to B-52's.

ARMY ASSOCIATION CHAPTERS may have to adopt a slogan of "Beat Pike's Peak or Bust." The Pikes Peak Chapter in Colorado has enrolled more than 3,800 members, is the largest in the Nation.

ARMY OPERATIONS OFFICERS are at work on plans to reorganize Reserve and National Guard units to conform with the new "Pentomic" structure for the Active Army. Transformation of some Reserve Forces units may start in the next fiscal year.

THE PENTOMIC ORGANIZATION is creating a problem in the officer career assignment pattern. Elimination of the battalion level curtails sharply opportunities for command experience. As Pentomic plans shape up, some infantry officers will be required to jump from command of a company, as a captain, to command of a battle group, as a colonel.

GENERAL BRYAN'S MOVE

The House Appropriations Committee wants the Armed Forces to cut down on travel, particularly permanent changes of station.

To give impetus to its desires, the Committee eliminated millions of dollars for PCS from the military budget.

Representative Gerald R. Ford, jr. (R-Mich), a member of the Army Appropriations panel, gave the House "an example of the kind of unnecessary travel" which the Committee wants eliminated.

Here is what he said:

"For a period of 18 months the Superintendent of the Military Academy at West Point was General Bryan [Lt. Gen. Blackshear M. Bryan]. He is a very competent and highly respected soldier. He was transferred from there, after being there 18 months, out to the South Pacific and given a very responsible position.

"He was there less than a year. Do you know where they sent him? Right back to New York City.

"In other words, he moved himself and his family from West Point, N. Y., out to the South Pacific and back again in less than a year.

"That is the kind of travel about which this subcommittee says 'You stop.' And we mean it. We do not condone it and we will not permit it. We will reduce the funds further if this is the kind of travel we are going to have face us every year."

The House approved the PCS cuts.

General Bryan, Commanding General of the U. S. Army Pacific, has been ordered to report to Governor's Island as Commanding General of the First U. S. Army sometime next month.

TIME-TESTED PIONEERING

GPM was founded in 1934 to serve the military. GPM offered Whole Life contracts to service personnel at standard rates at a time when such policies were not generally available from other companies. GPM pioneered special allotment premium rates, saving thousands of dollars yearly for service families. Today GPM protects more than 55,000 policyholders who own nearly $160,000,000 in life insurance.

Recommended by Best's and every other leading insurance rating authority.

INFLATOPLANE. An inflatable rubber aircraft manufactured by Goodyear Aircraft Corp. for the Office of Naval Research was demonstrated for members of the Aviation Writers Association at Naval Air Station, Olathe, Kans. Deflated, the entire aircraft, including engine, can be air dropped to ground forces and inflated by an air hose or vacuum cleaner. At the Olathe demonstration the Inflatoplane was inflated in a hangar and then took off from the parking apron. It uses less air pressure than an ordinary automobile tire. It is powered by a 44 horsepower Nelson engine.

2697th Air Reservists

Hear From AF, Industry

More than 100 reservists from all over South Texas and East Texas attended an important Air Reserve Conference sponsored recently by the 2697th Air Reserve Center, Houston, Tex.

The conference drew speakers from industry, civil defense and the Air Force to bring the reservists up to date on the current situations in each field.

Houston is a center of industrial and petroleum activity with the nation's second largest volume of shipping, the industrial panelists pointed out to the reservists. In the area served by the 269th Air Reserve Center are the chemical centers and ports of Texas City, Galveston, Corpus Christi, Beaumont and Port Arthur.

Industrial thinking leans away from the dispersion of industry for defense purposes, the Houston panelists agreed. The reason—thermonuclear warfare has predicated defense upon what this country can do before a bomb is dropped.

Reservists learned that companies like the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company and the Houston Lighting and Power Co. have been cooperating in defense planning for a long time. Companies like the Humble Oil & Refining Co. cooperate by encouraging their workers to take part in reserve and National Guard activities, the reservists were told, and giving them time for military leave (Summer Camp).

Reservists learned at first hand the capabilities and the thinking of the Strategic Air Command. Col. Charles M. Eisenhower, USAF, chief of staff of the Second Air Force, described the current movement to disperse the wings of the Strategic Air Command to 25 or more bases, some in squadron size.

The increased Russian capability and the increasing Soviet inventory of nuclear weapons has made this dispersion necessary, Colonel Eisenhower explained.

The first need of civil defense in Texas is enabling legislation by the state to provide legal grounds on which the civil defense organization can do its work in a catastrophe, said Brig. Gen. Eugene Maier, civil defense director for Houston and Harris County.

The reserve conference is to become an annual one, said Col. Joseph H. Batjer, USAF, commander of the reserve center. He explained to the reservists the operation of the current "Match-Merge" program.

Speakers also included Dr. Clanton W. Williams (Col., USAFR), president of the University of Houston, who spoke on the intentions of Communism; and Dr. Brian Eby, noted geologist who has visited Russia, on the Soviet industrial and military capabilities.

Confirm Admirals

The Senate has confirmed President Eisenhower's nomination of Rear Admirals James S. Russell, USN, and John H. Sides, USN, for promotion to the rank of Vice Admiral.

At the same time, RADM. Robert E. Dixon, USN, was confirmed as Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics for a four-year term.

"Soucek Field" Honors Late Chief Of BuAer

THE flying field at the Master Jet Base, Oceana, Va., has been dedicated to the memory of the late VADM. Apollo Soucek, USN-Ret., who ended his active career in 1955 as Chief of the Bureau of Aero-nautics.

During ceremonies held 4 June, VADM. James S. Russell, USN, the present BuAer Chief, unveiled a plaque in front of the Operations Building officially declaring the field "Soucek Field."

During his career, Admiral Soucek made significant contributions toward the development of air-planes. As a young lieu-tenant, he established numerous high altitude records for heavier-than-air craft and pioneered in the development of engines, propellers and flying equipment.

During WWII, the Admiral was as-signed as Air Officer aboard the USS Hornet upon her commissioning. He was serving in that capacity in April 1942 when, from her decks, Jimmie Doolittle led his B-25s on their raid against Tokyo. Admiral Soucek was the Hornet's Executive Officer when she was sunk during the Battle of Santa Cruz Island in October of the same year.

In 1952, the Admiral took command of Task Force 77 and directed sea and air operations against the enemy in Korea.

Among the dignitaries who attended the dedication were Admiral Soucek's brother LCDR. Zeus Soucek, USNR-Ret., and his cousins, Capt. V. H. Soucek, Test Director, Point Mugu Missile Test Center, and Capt. A. H. Soucek, USN, BuOrd Liaison, Naval Industrial Re-search Ordnance Plant, Pittsfield, Mass.

Navy Moves Eight Flags

The Navy has ordered new assign-ments for eight flag officers. RADM. Har-old T. Deutermann, USN, Deputy Com-mandant, Industrial College of the Armed Forces, takes command of Destroyer Flotilla Two.

He succeeds RADM. Robert T. S. Keith, USN, who becomes Commander, Naval Base, Subic Bay, P. I.

RADM. Lawrence R. Dasplitt, USN, Com-mander, Cruiser Division Six, relin-quishes his command to RADM. Michael F. D. Flaherty, USN, Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel for Plans. Admiral Dasplitt becomes Commander, Task Group 7.3.

RADM. Frank O'Beirne, USN, Com-mander, Fleet Command Armed Forces Special Weapons Project, Albuquerque, N. Mex., leads Carrier Division Three.

RADM. Arnold W. McKechnie, USN, Commander, Carrier Division Five, takes command of the Atlantic Sea Frontier.

RADM. Kenmore McManes, USN, Com-mander, Battleship-Cruiser Force, At-lantic Fleet, becomes Deputy Inspector General, Navy Department.

RADM. Lewis S. Parks, USN, Com-mander, Battleship Division Two, suc-ceeds Admiral McManes.

Promote Navy CWO's

SERVICE FAMILY NOTES

MAXWELL OFFICERS' WIVES CLUB elects new officers for the coming year. The new officers are Mrs. William E. Ross, President; Mrs. Frederick S. Wolf, First Vice-President; Mrs. Samuel E. Andrew, Second Vice-President; Mrs. Stanley H. Bear, Recording Secretary; Mrs. Howard L. Peckham, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. Robert W. Howell, Treasurer.

MISS Catherine Keith Bacon, daughter of Army Lt. Col. and Mrs. John A. Bacon of Anniston, Ala., was chosen "color girl" for the U. S. Naval Academy's June Week, by Midshipman William M. Mickle of Vashon, Wash., who commands the 3d Company judged the best of the 24 in the Academy Brigade. Her big moment came, on 6 June, when she passed the colors from the 11th Company, last year's winner, to the 3d Company. For this event, Miss Bacon stood beside RADM. William R. Smedberg, 3d, the Academy's Superintendent, to take the review of the 3600-man Brigade, at its final dress parade of the year.

AFOWC Says Farewell to Mrs. Twining—

Some 300 members of the Air Force Officers' Wives Club of Washington attended the farewell tea for their honorary president, Mrs. Nathan F. Twining, whose husband, the Air Force Chief of Staff, will soon become Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The affair was held on 5 May, in the ballroom of the Bolling AFB Officers' Club, which was transformed into a pink and white garden. Mrs. Twining was greeted with a pink carnation lei flown in from her native Hawaii for the occasion, and she and Mrs. Joseph M. McCoid, the retiring president of the Club, received the members in a setting of pink garden furniture before a background trellis of pink and white flowers.

In appreciation of her years of devotion to the Club and in token of the members' deep affection for her, Mrs. Twining received a gift, with the best wishes of the membership, in her new responsibilities as wife of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Soft background music was provided by the "VIP's" from Bolling, led by Sgt. Bruce Snyder, with many of Mrs. Twining's favorite numbers presented.

Those presiding at the tea tables included past honorary presidents of the Club, Mrs. Hoyt S. Vandenberg and Mrs. Carl Spaatz; the honorary vice-president, Mrs. Thomas D. White; a group of former presidents; and members of the 1956-57 Club Board.

Belvoir OWC Has Spring Musicales Tea—

More than a hundred members of the Officers' Wives Club of Ft. Belvoir, Va., gathered on 11 May, for their Spring musicale and tea, when Miss Carol Easton, daughter of Col. (JAGC) and Mrs. William G. Easton, presented a piano recital.

The receiving line was headed by the Club's president, Mrs. John M. Frank, and the honorary president, Mrs. David H. Tulley, who introduced the honor guests, who represented the various technical services of the Army. They included Mesdames Emerson C. Itschner, wife of the Chief of Engineers; A. B. Denniston, wife of the Deputy Quartermaster General; J. P. Cooney, Office of the Surgeon General; John Ulrick, president of the Ordnance Corps Women's Club; Howard E. Nestlerode, Signal Corps; W. E. R. Sullivan, Chemical Corps; and Robert C. Tripp, Transportation Corps.

The decorations were planned by Mrs. Frank Kowalski, chairman, who was assisted by Mesdames Leland Devore, J. K. Terry, Burton Chandler, D. Gilmer, C. S. Austin and G. H. Murphy. Members presiding at the tea tables, including some newcomers and others about to leave for new posts, were Mesdames W. G. Caldwell, W. C. Golden, William Smith, Ray Adams, Victor Reafsnider, W. Whitaker, Albert Schlafli, R. M. Kelly, P. T. Nation, Frank Lovejoy, Eskillis Chandler and N. J. Andre.

Army JAG Office to Have Dinner Dance—

The officers and civilian attorneys of the Office of the Judge Advocate General of the Army and their ladies have announced that a dinner dance will be held on the evening of Saturday, 15 June, at the Woodlawn Hall Officers' Club at Ft. Belvoir, Va.

Guests of honor will be the Judge Advocate General, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. George W. Hickman, jr.; the Assistant Judge Advocate General, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Stanley W. Jones; the Assistant Judge Advocate General, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Charles L. Decker; and the Assistant Judge Advocate General, Col. and Mrs. Robert H. McCaw.

Cocktails will be served at 7:00 p.m., with dinner and dancing following.

Andrews OWC Country Fair—

Members of the Andrews AFB Officers' Wives Club are making elaborate plans for a unique "do-it-yourself" show, an exhibit of arts and crafts created by members and their families, to be known as the "Andrews Country Fair." It will be held at the Officers' Club, on 11 June, from 2:30 to 8:00 p.m.

The Officers' Club will be transformed into the colorful scene of a country fair, with bright awninged booths dotting the terraces and lounges, music furnished by talented Club members and tea and punch for the visitors. The Fashion booth plans a style show, with members modeling self-made clothes and hats. A general Art booth will exhibit lithographs, water colors, oils, pastels, pen and ink sketches and sculpture. Household Furnishings will display upholstery and wood refinishing, and the Food booth will be a replica of a country store, selling homemade cakes, breads, cookies, candies, preserves, pickles, jellies and jams. Taking its theme from the Air Force song, the flower booth will feature such interesting arrangements as "first solo," "green card," "far horizons" and "flying high." In addition to these, there will be exhibits of needlework, crafts, writing and photography.

Mrs. Albert T. Wilson, jr., as general chairman, and her assistants, Mrs. Victor Miller, Mrs. Henry G. Thorne and several group chairmen are going all out to round up competent Club talent. Many distinguished guests have been invited, including wives of the foreign air attaches, of the Armed Forces secretaries, of ranking officers of all branches of the Service, and of members of the press.

AF Dental OWC Elects—

Election of new officers was held at the 22 May meeting of the Air Force Dental Officers' Wives Club, when members gathered for luncheon at the home of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Marvin E. Kenneback.

Following the voting, Mrs. Charles S. O'Grady turned the gavel over to Mrs. Willard H. Poor, the newly elected president. Mrs. Poor, in turn, introduced the new vice-president, Mrs. John A. Chapman, the incoming secretary, Mrs. Kenneth Eye, and the new treasurer, Mrs. Joseph Kreutzer.

Koch Family to Spend June Week At Annapolis—

Lt. Col. (USAF-Ret) and Mrs. Joseph W. Koch of 7403 Three Chopt Rd., Richmond, Va., are occupying the Kingsbury W. Gay home on Bywater Road, Annapolis, for June Week, when Midshipman J. W. MRS. TOMMIE FAW, wife of Lt. Col. J. N. Faw, Post Dental Officer, receives a crown of golf tees amid southern smiles for winning the Fort Rucker Women's Golf Association Spring Handicap recently. Crowning her is Brig. Gen. Carl I. Hutton, USA, Commanding General of the Army Aviation Center and Commandant of the Army Aviation School.

Gen. & Mrs. Hart Entertain—

Lt. Gen. Charles E. Hart, USA, Second U. S. Army Commander, and Mrs. Hart, entertained 7 June at a buffet supper in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Exall English of Lawton, Okla. Mr. English is the President of the Security Bank and Trust Company in Lawton and a nationally-known banker. He and Mrs. English are house guests of General and Mrs. Hart.

Invited guests included Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Einar B. Gjelsteen, and their daughter, Miss Ruth Anne Gjelsteen; Mrs. Farmer Edwards; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. F. A. Kriedel, and their daughter, Miss Sheila Jane Kriedel; and Col. and Mrs. Martin L. Green.

Daughter of Year Award—

Miss Mary Stuart Montague Price, daughter of Capt. (USN-Ret) and Mrs. Allen I. Price, received the "Daughter of the Year" award of the Sons and Daughters Day Foundation, at a luncheon on 22 May, with Mrs. Ivy Baker Priest, U. S. Treasurer, making the presentation. Miss Price is a well known social and debutante consultant in Washington. Hostess for the affair was Mrs. Gordon Kinney, Chairman of the Board making the award. Another luncheon followed on 24 May, with the award presented by Mrs. William B. Franke, wife of the Under Secretary of the Navy.

Miss Price organized the Debutante Cotillion and Thanksgiving Ball, which has become a Washington institution; Norfolk's Azalea Court is another of her projects, and coming up is the second Spring German, to be held on 7 June. The first was held in March and honored midshipmen and cadets from the Naval and Military Academies. June will see Miss Price busy with two Service daughters' debuts, when Miss Roberta Barnes, daughter of Capt. (USN) and Mrs. Robert McC. Barnes, and Miss Helen Elizabeth Kibler, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Edgar Kibler, will be presented.

Belvoir OWC to Elect—

The final meeting of the Officers' Wives Club of Ft. Belvoir, Va., will be held on Tuesday, 11 June, at 1 p.m., in Mackenzie Hall, when the members will elect officers for the next year. Party arrangements are being made by wives of the officers assigned to the 390th Engineer Construction Group and the USA Engineer Center Regiment, including Mesdames C. H. Waters, Doyt Naden, J. G. Whitt, H. E. Daniels, Ray LaVan, Jacob E. Moyer, Raymond Twiss, Alphonso Nilo and Ben Pollack. After the business meeting, drawings will be made for a door prize, and those who desire may spend the remainder of the afternoon playing bridge.

AG Ladies to Honor Mrs. Nixon—

Mrs. Richard Nixon will be guest of honor when the Adjutants General Ladies Luncheon Group meets for its final luncheon of the season, on 13 June, at Ft. McNair.

The guest speaker for the occasion will be Mrs. Myrtle Cheney Murdock, official guide of the Capitol and the author of several authoritative books. She will speak on the topic, "Our Capitol and Our Heritage."

Mrs. Charis Sparra is chairman for the luncheon. During the business session, Mrs. Justin G. Doyle, the president-elect, will be presented with the gavel and will preside for the remainder of the luncheon.

Nearly 100 Years Old... and Healthier than Ever!

Your JOURNAL today, in its 94th year of successful publication, is bought and read by a bigger proportion of all military officers on active duty than ever before.

Your JOURNAL today reaches more active duty military officers in each service branch... more Army officers, more Navy officers and more Air Force officers than any other A.B.C. audited business publication. ("A.B.C." stands for Audit Bureau of Circulations, nationally known publication auditing authority.)

Your JOURNAL today is the nation's most-quoted, most-authoritative publication in the military service field.

The reason for the JOURNAL's solid, continuing growth and "readership-leadership" among military officers is obvious.

The JOURNAL gives the military officer the best news coverage and analyses of subjects that concern him most.

Aviation Writers Elect

Geo. Rhodes President

St. Louis, Mo.

GEORGE A. Rhodes, Aviation Editor of the San Francisco Call-Bulletin, was elected president of the Aviation Writers Association at their annual convention here.

Mr. Rhodes, who had been first vice president of the Association and chairman of the convention committee last year in San Francisco, is a long-time aviation writer and widely known throughout the industry and the Armed Services.

Chosen First Vice President was Edwin G. Pipp, Aviation Writer for the Detroit News. Second Vice President is Miss Cecile L. Hamilton, Managing Editor of Flying Magazine, and Third Vice President is Stanley J. Cisowski of the Flint, Mich., Flying Reporter.

Reelected were: Leslie V. Spencer, of New York, as Treasurer; Ralph H. McLaren, of Jenkintown, Pa., as Executive Secretary, and George F. McLaughlin, of Jamaica, N. Y., as Historian.

The election was held in St. Louis, Mo. The Association, numbering some 860 members, was organized in 1938 and includes leading aviation writers and editors of newspapers, magazines and press services in all parts of the United States and Canada, as well as public relations representatives and other writers associated with the aviation industry and the Armed Services.

REPRESENTATIVE Herbert C. Benner (D-N. C.) has introduced a bill calling for creation of a new two-star billet of Chief Aviation Officer in the Coast Guard.

H. R. 7808, which has been referred to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, asks that the law be amended to permit the President to name a Chief Aviation Officer for a four-year term. The resolution provides that the top aviation officer be chosen from the active list of aviation officers on flying status, above the rank of lieutenant commander. While the Chief of Aviation serves in that capacity he is to be entitled to the pay and allowances of a two-star officer (upper half).

ACADEMY GRADUATES

The Coast Guard gained 61 officers on 1 June when the U. S. Coast Guard Academy graduated its 71st class.

Honor man in the class was Ens. John B. Lynn, USCG, who attained an average of 86.813 for the four-year course. For his achievement, Ensign Lynn was awarded the Academy Alumni Association prize—a $200 savings bond. In addition, he received prizes for excelling in ordnance and gunnery, power engineering, and communications.

Right behind Ensign Lynn—less than a half percentage point away from top honors—was Ens. John W. Kime, USCG, with an academic average of 86.286. Ensign Kime was honored as the Cadet who exhibited the highest qualities of military leadership.

Air Force Sec'y Tells Manning Problem, Mentions Cordiner Report In Testimony

SECRETARY of the Air Force James H. Douglas has spelled out Air Force "size and structure" plans for the year starting 1 July and has advised Congress again that despite reduction in wing strength it will be "difficult to live within the manpower program."

The Air Force, which had planned previously for 967,000 military personnel by 30 June 1958, now is shooting for 925,000 officers and airmen.

Here is the report on Air Force plans for wing strength and personnel as presented by Secretary Douglas to the Senate Appropriations Committee.

(Last week's issue of THE JOURNAL published similar information following earlier testimony by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker).

At the end of FY 1957 we will have 137 wings, but not in the same composition as was presented last year. One strategic fighter wing has been replaced by a light strategic reconnaissance wing and five fighter type wings previously scheduled for completion in FY 1957 have not been added to the Force.

On the other hand, four troop carrier assault wings, previously carried as part of the flying support forces, will now be included as a part of the major combat forces for the first time, and one Matarador-equipped tactical missile wing not previously counted in the major combat forces until FY 1958, is now so classified for FY 1957.

Therefore, while we will have a total of 137 wings on board, 6 of those will differ from what was planned a year ago and 131 will be unchanged.

DURING FY 1958, we propose to reduce the force further, to 128 wings. This will be done by dropping 5 strategic fighter wings, 1 tactical bomb wing, and 3 fighter bomb wings. These changes stem from a thorough review of the tasks to be performed and the means at our disposal with which to perform them.

Dropping the strategic fighter wings in this time period does not affect materially the capability of our strategic forces. As the B-52's replace the B-36's the strategic fighters are to be eliminated in favor of higher priority forces.

The number of wings in our tactical forces will be decreased, partly because of the greater firepower and mobility of each wing and partly because the Army's tactical missile program will result in a reduction in its requirements for close support by fighter bombers. Further, we are replacing subsonic aircraft with supersonic aircraft. Another factor in the decreased number of tactical wings is the fact that our allies have increased their forces and capabilities in the tactical field.

OUR AIR DEFENSE wings will remain unchanged in number, 32 wings, in FY 1958. The Air Defense interceptor forces now include operational units of F-102s, and there will be further continuous modernization through conversion of units to advanced aircraft. In the unmanned or missile element, important progress is being made. The production Bomarc is now being flown in test and the program is on schedule.

MANPOWER CEILINGS have been lowered under our new program. While this is consistent, to a degree, with the reduction in wings, and changes in force composition, there must be borne in mind other factors, such as activation of many new bases and sites, bigger B-52 squadrons and a large number of tanker squadrons. These developments will make it difficult to live within the manpower program.

In place of the previously planned 967,000 military on-board by end-fiscal year 1958, we now program a level of 925,000. On the civilian side we plan a goal of 341,000 direct-hire civilians, in contrast with a previously planned goal of 333,000. In the aggregate, the new ceilings represent a reduction of 34,000 spaces below our last previous schedule for fiscal year 1958.

These manpower ceilings are tight and will present management difficulties, but none, we believe, that will be insurmountable or will seriously impair our over-all effectiveness, provided we can increase the retention rate of our technically trained personnel.

The requirement for quality in the force is pointed up and intensified further by these reduced ceilings. We cannot afford the inefficiency and the expense in time, money and manpower, which are occasioned by low rates of retention of people in whose training we have made substantial investments.

SIGNIFICANT IMPROVEMENT in our over-all retention rate has already been experienced, as a result of career incentive legislation enacted by the Congress in recent years and steps the Air Force has been able to take. Our current problem is the differential in retention among the various airman skills. Experienced, technically qualified men are still leaving the Air Force in what we regard as excessive numbers.

The Department of Defense has been studying this problem for some time, as has the Air Force. The Cordiner Committee report points the road to a compensation plan to pay for ability rather than longevity. The Air Force anticipates some benefits stemming from these recommendations in the near future.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

TAKING OFF AFTER MAKING a run on V-bottom skis, is a jet-augmented Fairchild C-123B "Provider." The ski equipped aircraft was recently tested by the Air Force Operational Test Center on the Greenland icecap to determine its employment and suitability in the Arctic area. As a result of the test ten C-123s will be equipped with skis and Fairchild J-44 jet engines and will then be assigned to the Greenland area, where they will transport cargo to support civilian scientists on T-3 Ice Island. Maj. James M. Myers of the 324th Test Group (Transport and Equipment) was the Senior Project Officer for the test.

Builders of Defense

THE FIRESTONE TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY has been awarded a contract by The Martin Company to develop and test components of the new Matador TM-61 B guided missile, it is announced by Dr. J. L. Miller, Director of Defense Activities for the rubber firm. Work will be conducted by the company's Defense Research Division and its Monterey, California, Engineering Laboratory. A new submarine launching system for the Regulus guided missile is being developed by Firestone for the Navy.

GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY'S Aircraft Gas Turbine Division has been awarded a $12 million Air Force contract for engineering design studies to improve the J79 jet engine. General E. W. Rawlings, USAF, Commander of the Air Materiel Command, said the contract was part of an estimated $32 million product improvement program for the engine. The J79 powers the Convair B-58 Hustler, the Air Force's first supersonic bomber, the Lockheed F-104A Starfighter, the world's fastest production fighter, the Navy Grumman F11F-1F Tiger fighter, and the Regulus II ground-to-air missile.

AC SPARK PLUG DIVISION of General Motors has disclosed it is producing "sky platforms" to guide missiles or planes thousands of miles over land, water or ice "automatically and with phenomenal accuracy." Mr. Joseph A. Anderson, General Manager, said the division is "now in production, on an assembly line basis, of gyroscopes and associated apparatus that make up these guidance devices."

AMERICAN MACHINE & FOUNDRY COMPANY has named Wilfred E. Walton, 35, formerly with General Electric Company for 13 years, as Director of Engineering at the Rochester, N. Y. Division here, which is working on a major guided missile program contract.

LOCKHEED AIRCRAFT CORPORATION has received a go-ahead contract from the Navy for pre-production work on a new saucer-domed radar plane with prop-jet power. Described by company officials as a multi-million dollar implementation contract, the order covers initial engineering and manufacturing preparations for a "higher flying, longer range" aerial picket ship.

RADIO CORPORATION OF AMERICA has been given an Air Force product improvement contract to develop industry-wide design and reliability standards for various types of airborne electronic equipment, it is announced by Theodore A. Smith, Executive Vice-President, RCA Defense Electronic Products. The USAF award is a three-phase contract which also calls for utilization of new standards in the development by RCA of an improved UHF airborne communications system for USAF aircraft. The new communications system will be based on RCA's ARC-34 command communications set, a remotely controlled, sub-miniature radio set widely used by the Air Force.

F-101 Flies 1050 Miles In One Hour 25 Min.

McCONNELL AFB, WICHITA, KANS.

MAJ. Austin Julian, USAF, flying a McDonnell F-101 Voodoo, flew over the finish line here 30 May after a 1,050 mile flight from Edwards AFB, Calif. His speed averaged more than 750 miles per hour. The flight was completed in an hour and 25 minutes.

Major Julian, who is project officer for the F-101 at the Air Force Flight Test Center at Edwards, refueled from a Boeing KC-135 jet tanker 40,000 feet above Santa Fe, N. Mex.

The F-101 landed here in the course of an aerial demonstration staged for members of the Aviation Writers Association visiting here from their convention in St. Louis.

Earlier, at St. Louis, the McDonnell Aircraft Corp., had shown them their new F-101B model of the Voodoo. It is similar to the earlier Voodoo, but is a two-seat model to carry a radar observer.

PHILLIPS PETROLEUM COMPANY at Bartlesville, Okla., has been cited for outstanding service to the Air Force in the field of solid propellant rocketry from 1951 to the present. A scroll of appreciation was presented by Maj. Gen. John W. Sessums, Jr., USAF, Vice Commander, U. S. Air Force Air Research and Development Command.

SPERRY RAND CORPORATION began construction of a $2,000,000 electronics facility for development of advanced radar instrumentation at Clearwater, Fla.

REPUBLIC AVIATION CORPORATION has named Mr. William V. Platt, a partner in the New York insurance brokerage firm of Flynn, Harrison and Conroy, as a director, it is announced by Mundy I. Peale, president. Mr. Platt served in the Navy as a lieutenant commander with a destroyer squadron in WWII. He is a 1939 graduate of Yale University and president of the Yale Club of New York.

RYAN AERONAUTICAL COMPANY Firebee jet target drone missiles will be used by the Royal Canadian Air Force. Canada is the first foreign country to adopt the Firebee for anti-aircraft training of its defense forces. The jet-fast, remote-controlled drone, capable of simulating evasive action of enemy planes, has gone into operational use with the Air Force and Navy, and a more advanced version is now being tested at the Holloman Air Development Center, N. Mex.

THE BURROUGHS CORPORATION has developed an electronic control system capable of performing 136,000 mathematical steps in less than a second to assist anti-aircraft operations center officers. The equipment, officially called the Multi-weapon Automatic Target and Battery Evaluator (MATABE), was conceived by engineers of the Army Signal Engineering Laboratories, Ft. Monmouth, New Jersey.

Westinghouse Displays J54 Turbojet at Olathe

NAVAL AIR STATION, OLATHE, KANS.

THE Westinghouse Aviation Gas Turbine Division revealed performance details from the initial flight test of their privately-financed J54 turbojet engine to Aviation Writers' Association members visiting the Westinghouse jet engine flight test center here.

Westinghouse flight test engineers reported successful completion of every engine light-off at various altitudes, and every jam acceleration at maximum altitude. The engine satisfactorily completed all required tests throughout a range limited only by performance of the B-45 flying test bed, it was said.

Westinghouse officials added that the engine demonstrated completely stall-free performance at all of the scheduled test points over a broad operating range. Jam accelerations—where the engine throttle is quickly thrown wide open—were accomplished at altitudes more than 20% above the B-45's normal service ceiling. The extra altitude was made possible by the additional power supplied by the J54 being tested in a test pod under the B-45's bomb bay.

The J54 turbojet has completed a 150-hour endurance test in addition to the initial flight test. Westinghouse, in bringing the engine design to its present stage of development, says it has spent over 13 million dollars on manpower and materials. Another 12 million dollars has been invested in new laboratory and test facilities to help reduce jet engine development cycle time. The fact that the J54 was brought from design-on-paper to prototype-on-test in just 11½ months was pointed to as indicative of the return Westinghouse has been able to obtain on their facilities investment.

After several hundred hours of static testing and test cell performance verification, the J54 was transferred to the Flight Test Center for evaluation in the air. Located just 20 miles south of the main Westinghouse jet engine plant in Kansas City, Mo., the Olathe Naval Air Station here is an ideal location for flight test operations. This particular area averages 310 days per year VFR flight weather. VFR flight weather is particularly important in engine flight test operations as most normal flying instruments must be removed from test aircraft to make room for turbojet test instrumentation.

At the present time, the Westinghouse Flight Test Center is testing an advanced version of the J34 turbojet engine slated to power the North American Aviation T2J Navy basic Trainer. Further test operations are planned to center about J54 development. Testing is planned for advanced versions of the J54 at altitudes above those considered operational for current jet aircraft. The extent of high-altitude testing will be determined by sponsoring contracts from the military services, Westinghouse officials added.

FAIRCHILD ENGINE AND AIRPLANE CORPORATION

reports volume production of the Fairchild Armalite automatic rifle, the AR-10, will begin soon in Holland. President Richard S. Boutelle of Fairchild, concluded the agreement with President Directeur F. G. Jungeling of Artillerie-Inrichtingen. The Dutch company will have production and sales rights in the Netherlands, Germany, France, Italy, Austria, Belgium, Luxembourg, Spain and Portugal. It also will serve as a production source for sale of AR-10 rifles in other sections of the world, and terms of the agreement call for Artillerie-Inrichtingen to be tooled for quantity production capacity by 1 Jan. 1958. The AR-10, which weighs less than seven pounds, was designed by the Armalite Division of Fairchild, and utilizes the NATO 7.62mm cartridge. Artillerie-Inrichtingen, founded in 1679, has for many years served as arsenal to the Netherlands armed forces as well as an armaments source for other nations. Destroyed during WW II, it has been completely re-equipped for modern weapons production.

Beech Shows Combat Reconnaissance Drone

WICHITA, KANS.

BEECH Aircraft Corporation unveiled its proposed Beechcraft Model 1013 combat reconnaissance drone before members of the Aviation Writers Association attending a local air industry program at McConnell AFB here.

The Model 1013, adapted from Beechcraft's Model 1001 (Navy XKDB-1) target plane, is designed for photo and television reconnaissance applications. Equipped with multiple camera installations, the remote-controlled Model 1013 can be used for both day and night battle area surveillance and enemy position observation.

Beech officials also revealed that first free flights of the XKDB-1, the Navy's newest target vehicle, were made recently at the Naval Air Missile Test Center, Point Mugu, Cal. The XKDB-1 is currently undergoing contractor development testing to evaluate performance, radio guidance and recovery characteristics.

The Beech-designed drones are actually small, pilotless aircraft. External configurations of both models are virtually identical. High wing monoplanes with distinctive "V" tails, their slender cylindrical fuselages measure a foot and a half in diameter and 13 and a half feet in length. Both have wing spans of 12 feet. Endurance of the Model 1013 is 75 minutes. The Model 1001 will fly an hour.

The Model 1013 reconnaissance version, heaviest of the two at 800 pounds gross weight, is powered by a 110 hp McCulloch six-cylinder engine. It will have an operational speed of 260 mph and service ceiling of 22,800 feet. A 120 hp turbo-supercharged McCulloch engine powers the Model 1001 (Navy XKDB-1). It flies at 320 mph at altitudes above 40,000 feet. Gross weight of the target drone is 600 pounds.

Other Beech research and development work now in progress here includes engineering test programs on aircraft emergency escape systems; launching and recovery systems for missiles, drones and manned aircraft, and numerous classified projects in the advanced fields of aerodynamics, cryogenics, thermodynamics, electronics, and aircraft range extension.

GE Free Training In Instrumentation

Eleven comprehensive courses in aircraft instrumentation are now being offered at the Technical Training School operated by General Electric's Instrument Department in West Lynn, Mass.

Training is designed to cover the features, installation, operation, and maintenance of aircraft instruments. Courses range from jet-exhaust temperature systems to theoretical principles of true mass fuel flow, and include a series of maintenance and overhaul courses covering failure analysis, teardown, rebuilding, calibration, and test.

Technical instruction is free, including all necessary course materials, and open to anyone interested in aircraft instrumentation. All other costs, such as transportation and living expenses, are borne by the student.

Certificates are awarded to all students upon the completion of any one course or combination of courses, and special arrangements are made to recognize completion of the courses by military personnel.

Full information can be obtained by writing: Technical Training School, Instrument Department, General Electric Company, 40 Federal Street, West Lynn, Mass.

CURTISS-WRIGHT CORPORATION reports for the three months ended 31 March, a consolidated net profit of $9,942,256, after provision for federal income taxes. This compares with consolidated net profit, after taxes, of $9,196,000 for the quarter ended 31 March, 1956. Mr. Roy T. Hurley, Chairman and President, pointed out that more than 60 per cent of the earnings for the first quarter of 1957 were derived from commercial business as compared to approximately 50 per cent for the first quarter of 1956.

Army Tells Congress Training Is Impaired By Differences With Air Force; Says Tactical Aircraft Supporting Field Force Should Be Under Army Command

THE following is the text of an Army report to the House Armed Services Committee on the subject of "Close Air Support." It follows publication in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL of a letter from a retired Army general officer, released by Representative Leon H. Gavin (R-Pa.), which charged that current Defense doctrine has "undermined the Army."

The Army now tells in this official document its concept of tactical air power for support of field forces.

The controversy over tactical airpower was pointed up in an Air Force communication to the House Armed Services Committee (THE JOURNAL, 23 March), which said that Marine Corps type of tactical air support is "lavish." The Air Force statement quoted from the Army Field Manual 100-5 and said that "The Army concept ignores the fact that both the United States Navy and United States Air Force are capable of decisive action in their media."

The Air Force study said "No one theater component is self-contained, or capable within itself of achieving the theater mission. The Army/Air Force positions are therefore in conflict."

Here is what the Army told the House Committee this week:

1. INTRODUCTION. The following excerpts from Department of Defense directives are pertinent to an understanding of the Department of the Army's position concerning close air support:

a. Close combat air support of Army forces is assigned to the U. S. Air Force as a primary function by paragraph A5 of Section VI, DOD Directive No. 5100.1, 1 October 1953.

b. DOD Directive No. 5160.32, 13 March 1957, clarifies the above stated responsibilities as follows: "The U. S. Air Force includes among its primary responsibilities those of furnishing close combat and logistical air support for the U. S. Army. These responsibilities are continuing in nature, from the immediate outset and throughout the course of all combat operations, and for peacetime training. While extent of such support, by nature, is not readily susceptible of specific delimitation, it must at all times meet the reasonable requirements specified by the U. S. Army, either for combat operations or for training, and the U. S. Air Force shall be prepared to devote an appreciable portion of its resources to such support and to the establishment and organization which may be required therefor."

2. RELATIONSHIP OF THE SERVICES. The Army is an essential member of the Army-Navy-Air Force team which, through appropriate combination of mutually supporting capabilities of all the Services, develops the military strength necessary to deter war or to be victorious in war if the deterrent fails. The Army's support of the concept that the components of the three Services must operate in concert to obtain national objectives extends through all levels of operation—from the application of global strength to the tactics of the lowest echelon involving the use of forces from more than one of the Armed Services. This includes, of course, the theater level where the Army believes that no one component is sufficiently self contained or capable within itself of achieving the theater mission.

The Army's support of this balanced force concept is set forth in the Army field manual which contains its doctrine for combat operations, FM100-5. This publication states in paragraph 5, "During periods of peace and war, Army forces in conjunction with Air and Naval forces have the over-all mission of supporting national policies and objectives. Their maintenance and proper balance are essential if the objectives of national policy are to be attained. Forces in proper balance are those allocated from land, naval, and air forces or the elements of any one or more of these to meet the requirements of a given mission and trained to operate in concert for a single purpose."

3. COMMAND RELATIONSHIPS NECESSARY FOR OPTIMUM CLOSE AIR SUPPORT. History has clearly demonstrated that unity of command is a prerequisite for success in battle. In other words, only one commander should be responsible for the success of a particular combat operation. The Army believes, therefore, that the responsible commander at each echelon must be vested with the authority necessary to control the operations of all forces which have been provided to him for the accomplishment of his mission.

The location in the chain of command and the Service of this responsible commander will vary with situation. In a small task force operation, he could be the commander of an Army battle group or a parallel Naval, Air Force, or Marine formation. In larger operations, the responsible commander should be at a higher level and will be a member of the Service which has primary responsibility for the success of the operation.

The field army commander is responsible for the success of ground combat operations related to his mission. This responsibility is delegated to corps, division, and subordinate commanders as they are assigned the subordinate objectives necessary to the success of the over-all mission.

One of the most important means of influencing the outcome of ground combat action is the commander's flexible and versatile application of supporting firepower. To accomplish his mission, the commander must be provided the capability and the authority of massing available firepower quickly upon critical targets.

In the employment of its artillery, the Army follows a procedure which permits both centralization and decentralization of this authority as dictated by the situation. In view of the requirement for the immediate responsiveness of supporting fires to the responsible commander's wishes and needs, control of artillery firepower is habitually decentralized to the lowest possible echelon; however, provision is always made for its rapid return to higher commanders when necessary.

Combat aircraft utilized in close support of the field army are primarily utilized to extend the ground commander's firepower. The integration of aircraft firepower with that of maneuvering land forces is difficult to achieve, even under the most favorable conditions. Lack of control of this firepower by the appropriate ground commander results in (a) unacceptable delays in the delivery of the close support required, (b) the necessity to coordinate rather than direct the fire support furnished by aircraft, and (c) inability of the ground commander to rely upon aircraft being available when required. These three factors combine to prevent the ground commander from making the most effective use of all of his firepower, either in planning or in the conduct of operations. As in the case of artillery, optimum results require tailoring of control authority to fit the needs of the battle. Inflexible centralization of this control is impracticable for the varying conditions of ground combat.

The Army expresses its quantitative requirements for close air support in terms of one Air Force wing of about 75 aircraft per Army division in contact with the enemy. This requirement is, however, only a yardstick for operational planning and does not mean that a wing should invariably be assigned to support each division involved.

The Army recognizes that these wings will have missions other than close support of divisions and may have to be massed for use by corps, army, army group, or for theater-wide assignments, air or ground. However, the Army believes that, normally, the general direction and control of that portion of the air effort allotted to support Army units should be subject to decentralization, as appropriate, to corps or divisions, with the proviso that the tactical air force retain at all times the capability to regain centralized control for immediate diversion to higher priority missions as directed by higher authority.

4. THE EFFECT OF MISSILES ON CLOSE AIR SUPPORT. The increasing development and use of surface-to-surface missiles will improve the effectiveness and range of the organic weapons available to the Army commander. Combined with improving means for finding targets and evaluating the success of fires on these targets, these missiles are expected to be more effective than fighter-bombers in providing accurate, responsive, and all-weather close support.

However, the Army considers that for the foreseeable future there continues to be close support missions which will require piloted aircraft. These include: tactical reconnaissance, target acquisition, protection of Army formations deep in enemy territory from attack by enemy aircraft, attacks on fast moving enemy targets, attacks on targets beyond the range of Army weapons, attacks on targets protected by the terrain from ground weapons, and the augmentation of Army fires on critical targets.

As Army missile and rocket units are phased into the force structure and the Army develops improved target acquisition systems, there will be a concurrent downward adjustment in the Army's requirements for tactical air support. This might well result in a reduction in the number of Air Force tactical wings.

The Secretary of Defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff are aware of this problem, and it is currently under study by a joint Army-Air Force committee. However, in connection with improved target acquisition means, there will probably develop a requirement for relatively high performance aircraft capable of vertical or short take-off and landing to search the so-called mid-range areas of the combat zone, 30 to 100 miles in front of the line of contact. This requirement will have to be met by the Air Force or by Army aviation.

5. TRAINING. The doctrinal differences between the Army and the Air Force concerning close air support, until resolved, will impair the effectiveness of joint training. The Army considers that, through trial, objective analysis, and mutual concessions during peacetime training, differing views can be resolved and joint doctrine and procedures established. In this connection, appropriate agencies of both Services are concurrently endeavoring to settle the existing divergences of opinion on the matter of air support.

6. CONCLUSION. It is the Army's opinion that elements of theater air forces which are allocated to the close support of a field army must be immediately and fully responsive to the requirements and direction of the responsible Army commander. Tactical air employed in an air-ground role in the field army combat zone is in support of the ground commander and must be immediately responsive to his general direction and control. General direction and control is defined as the authority to direct missions to be flown by aircraft allotted to the close support of Army forces and to prescribe targets, type of munition, time over target, and the degree of neutralization or destruction desired.

USMA Graduation

Number One Man in the U. S. Military Academy Class of '57 is 2d Lt. John H. Vickers of Fairfield, Conn. He chose the Corps of Engineers.

Lieutenant Vickers was awarded 12 of the 29 military and academic prizes.

Other prize winners are 2d Lts. William T. Huckabee, Samuel J. Newsome, Jr., James R. Murphy, Richard T. White, Ronald D. Kennedy, Richard D. Kenyon, Richard M. Pastore, Charles H. Cooper, William R. Ellis, Henry J. Hatch, Gene E. Beinförde, Michael R. Keating, Robert P. Christiansen, Harper B. Keeler and James F. Russell.

A special Mass for visiting alumni was held at West Point on Sunday, 2 June by Father Francis of the Order of St. Benedict, who is the former Maj. James N. Studer, USMA '42.

Reunion classes this year include '27, of which Lt. Gen. Garrison H. Davidson, USMA Superintendent, is a member; '17, which includes former Chiefs of Staff J. Lawton Collins and Matthew B. Ridgeway and General Mark W. Clark, now President of The Citadel; and the Class of '07, which included the late General of the Air Force H. H. Arnold.

West Point officials report that of the 139 graduates in the April '17 class, 45 became general officers; it was 22 out of 151 for the August '17 class. In the '27 class, 42 of the 203 graduates have become generals.

CAA's "CARF" Provides Safe Separation For Mass Military Air Movements In U. S.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.

FROM the fifth floor of a downtown office building here a staff of 23 Civil Aeronautics Administration experts operate a "clearing house" that handles and processes, approves, and provides safe and efficient separation for all mass military air movements within the continental limits of the United States and certain specified Oceanic areas.

Its communications system is tied in with the network of the Strategic Air Command as well as with the CAA and by teletype with overseas areas where transoceanic mass flights bound for points within the U. S. originate.

The establishment, known as the Central Altitude Reservation Facility, or "CARF" for short, is under the direction of Mr. Medford W. Smith, a veteran CAA employee.

Complex planning and detailed briefing of air crews and supporting forces must take days in advance of any mass movement of SAC or other military aircraft. Therefore, the military sponsor must obtain advance approval from all Air Traffic Control Centers for usage of such airspace, or airways, which these missions will require for the completion of their flight.

To simplify and efficiently coordinate these problems, the CAA in conjunction with the Air Force, set up CARF last July.

Since then CARF has handled 2,000 such missions involving at least 34,000 aircraft. These include hundreds of SAC practice missions involving one or more refueling missions. With propeller type tanker aircraft, this means that the bombers must be assigned one path and altitude and the tankers another with a meeting point at which the bombers must come down to the tankers level and then return to their cruising altitude.

CAA sees that such missions are kept away from each other, as well as away from high density areas of commercial traffic, from other jet training areas etc.

On the day THE JOURNAL reporter visited the Facility, for example the wall map for the day showed plots for 17 mass flights ranging in size from six to 42 aircraft each and covering virtually every state in the union.

Also visiting and inspecting the Facility at the time was Mr. William B. Davis, Deputy CAA Administrator, and Mr. Edward Marsh, Deputy Regional Controller.

Most of the jet missions fly from 29,000 to 41,000 feet high. But inasmuch as 2,000 feet is considered a safe separation this means there are only six such spaces assignable.

While the Facility is of great assistance to the military it is also providing CAA with great experience against the day when high speed jet commercial traffic will be filling the skies.

USNA Graduation

Top man in the USNA '57 class is 2d Lt. Forrest R. Hanvey, Jr. of Anaheim, Calif. He was graduated with an average of 1121.64 out of a possible 1200 and was commissioned in the Air Force.

Under Secretary of the Navy William B. Franke told the USNA graduates how he had been offered an appointment to West Point. He confided that "my mother wouldn't let me try for it because she didn't want her boy to be a soldier."

June Week was highlighted by dedication of the U. S. Naval Academy Field House on 5 June, construction of which was started 20 April 1955 when Admiral Ben Moreell, CEC, USN-Ret., then Chairman of the Board of Visitors, drove the first of 580 foundation piles into the ground. There's a seating capacity for 6000. The Field House was used for the graduation ceremonies on 7 June.

In addition to Lieutenant Hanvey, who took six awards, other '57 graduates who were honored for scholastic attainments and military proficiency include: Anders T. Anderson, Arthur A. Aronson, Frank W. Parker, John A. McMorris, II, Robert A. Doragh, Charles D. Goddard, James P. Googe, Jr., John E. Nolan, Francis H. Stoodley, Roy F. Arnold, William H. Peerenboom, Jonathan T. Howe, Philip N. Pappacio, Arthur T. Spring, Alton I. Crowell, Jr., Thomas F. Drumm, Jr., Leo G. Hyatt, James J. O'Connell, William McE. Mickle, Andrew F. Dulik, William J. Heske, Frank F. Alvarez.

A Knowing Look

When Lockheed wanted to watch the in-flight behavior of the giant skis on their 62 ton C-130 Hercules propjet—they used an IT&T closed-circuit TV system to show engineers inside the plane exactly what was happening.

Closed-circuit television systems developed by International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation are proving to be valuable tools for industry, management, and the military.

When there's a need to see, you can use the eyes of the TV camera to overcome distance, dust, or hazardous locations—even to peer inside a boiler! It takes you anywhere—and sees everything.

This is another major contribution in visual telecommunication and electronic controls by the creative engineering of IT&T.
